Waiting for Death, She Sews.
Americans Are Scarcer.
The Seaplanes Are Coming.
At Least, We Play Games.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

GENTLEMEN THAT write history, in the future, will be interested in a little picture of our 1933 civilization.

It shows Mrs. Anna Antonio in a death cell at Sing Sing Prison, working at a sewing machine, while waiting to be killed in the electric chair for murdering her husband.

She has two daughters, 8 and 6 years old, and a boy 2 years old; and she told the warden she would like to make some clothes for them before she died. The sewing machine was kindly supplied.

THAT IS real news because it never happened before.

It will be news also when men enter that death cell, take the woman from her sewing machine, shave her head for application of the wet electrode, and send her a long way from her three children.

It would seem that some better plan might be worked out.

Why not let the mother stay in prison and work for her children? Perhaps Gov. Lehman, of New York, will decide to save the little boy and his two sisters from the unpleasant memory that their mother was killed in the electric chair.

Was it worse for an ignorant mother to kill her husband, than for an enlightened state to disgrace, for life, her innocent children?

BIRTHS ARE diminishing all over the United States. In 1930 there were hardly enough births to make up for the deaths, and now, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company:

"With the further decline registered, we have undoubtedly passed the balance mark."

This means that Americans are dying more rapidly than they are being born.

IT IS a pity, since this country could easily support ten times as many people as it has now. In fact, Texas alone could easily feed that number, intensively cultivated.

And immigration from foreign countries, which built up this country originally, has dropped to almost nothing.

The birth rate is extremely low in California, but the native sons explain that easily:

"People DIE so rarely in this state that there is no need of having babies born so often."

CHICAGO'S "Century of Progress" Exposition will soon see Gen. Italo Balbo with his twenty-four Italian seaplanes landing on Lake Michigan.

Yesterday the Italian air armada alighted at Reykjavik, Iceland, half way on the journey.

It is not necessary to emphasize what this flight means to the United States in connection with future wars.

The English knew that their old days of security from invasion had passed when the first airplane flew over the channel, to land in England.

This country should learn something when those twenty-four Italian planes land on Lake Michigan, having flown the Atlantic.

AMERICANS may not lead in diplomacy, but they seem to understand games that call for good sight, good nerves, speed, strength and determination.

At Wimbledon, Vines, Californian, defeated Cochet, the able Frenchman, at tennis for the third time.

There were many vacant seats when Helen Wills Moody, also of California, played an English expert. No wonder, it took the California girl just twenty minutes to win in two sets, which read 6-0, 6-0. Englishmen would hardly buy seats to watch that.

HAGEN, the American professional who has won in England four times, took the lead in the British open golf championship yesterday, making the round of 18 holes in 68, 5 under par.

If the American dollar manages to do as well as our athletic champions are doing, everything will be serene.

EUROPE STILL thinks the dollar is not very good. It was quoted yesterday at 73.98 cents, compared with its old gold value. A dollar used to be worth about 25 francs in the estimation of Frenchmen. Now it is worth only a little more than 18 francs.

All this means little to those who realize that the value of a dollar, a pound or a franc depends on what it will buy.

THE ARGENTINE government orders an official funeral for the late former president, Hipolito Yrigoyen, with cannon salutes and soldiers, but will not permit a public lying-in-state. There is fear of demonstrations by radicals who revere Yrigoyen's memory.

Thousands climbed the stairs to Yrigoyen's little apartment to pass before his coffin. They saw him in the white tunic of a Franciscan monk, a crucifix in his hand.

The Russian tsars, including Ivan the Terrible, made it a point to change their gorgeous raiment for the humble clothing of a monk when they thought they were dying, as a matter of caution. Yrigoyen was, all his life, a simple, humble man.

NOTED STARS PLAY BEFORE 49,000

Thousands Turned Away From Gates In Chicago

COMISKEY PARK, July 6.—(AP.)—Forty-nine thousand fans jammed Comiskey Park today to witness the most costly array of stars in baseball's turbulent history engage in the first major league all-star combat.

Not a cloud streaked the skies as the capacity throng started trooping into the park hours before game time. It was a beautiful day, crisp and just cool enough with a light breeze. In center field the Stars and Stripes waved lazily above the bleachers that were jammed as early as 10:30 a. m., central standard time—almost two hours before the dream game was scheduled to start.

N. L. STARS OUT EARLY

The National League stars, attired in natty uniforms with the insignia "National League" printed across their shirt fronts arrived first. The American Leaguers wore travel uniforms of white. Lonnie Warneke, ace pitcher for the Cubs drew a cheer as he beat the pack of stars to the bat bag, and started to bat out bunts. Tony Cuccinello, of Brooklyn, kept the others busy chasing short smashes.

Joe Cronin, young boss of the league-leading Washington Senators, was the first American Leaguer on the field and responded to salvos of applause by belting several long ones off Ed Rommell, of the Athletics. Ben Chapman, of the Yanks, stole his stuff immediately by parking four successive balls into the left field bleachers as the National Leaguers watched him with awe. Babe Ruth drew a big cheer, but failed to hit a ball out of the infield in

Nicola Spurs Hall Site Fight

The legal battle to force Allegheny County to purchase the $1,100,000 Oakland town hall site of F. F. Nicola's Schenley Farms Company will be continued.

Attorney William Watson Smith, counsel for Nicola, today announced that the town hall contract approved by the old board of County Commissioners will be taken before County Controller Robert G. Woodside with a request for performance.

Controller Woodside had no comment to make today.

Under such a demand it will be the Controller's duty to hold a public hearing to inquire into all phases of the transaction.

It is believed that since the unsuccessful suit of Alderman John J. Verona for a $150,000 commission on the town hall site, more evidence is available and Verona may be asked to testify.

HARDY NO COMIC TO HIS WIFE

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—(AP.)—Oliver Hardy, he of the damp forehead bangs of the comedy screen, carried his slapstick comedy into the house—but in no slapstick comedy vein—his wife complained in a cross action in Superior Court to the actor's divorce suit.

In her complaint, filed yesterday, she said Oliver dropped no less than $30,000 in one day by wagering on the bangtails at Agua Caliente, border resort, and once appeared at his home with a friend, both with shotguns, to wait out the night as the aftermath of a slapping episode with his sister-in-law on the receiving end.

Mrs. Hardy wants a divorce and $1,400 monthly alimony, not counting $4,000 in attorney's fees.

Mrs. Mary Hunter, the sister-in-law, who got slapped—Mrs. Hardy deposes—has filed a suit against Hardy for $50,000 to compensate for damages suffered.

Hardy's teammate on the screen, Stan Laurel, also is in court, defendant in a divorce suit.

HUGE TAPLIN PROFIT BARED

Financier Saw 1929 Crash Coming, He Says

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 6. — A rather young Middle Western "dabbler" in railroad stocks, who foresaw the market crash of October, 1929, told the Senate banking inquiry today how he "unloaded" control of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad on the Pennroad Corporation in 1929 at a profit in excess of $20,000,000.

He was Frank E. Taplin, of Cleveland, president of the road. He netted a personal profit of $7,899,877 for himself and family on the deal.

FORESAW CRASH

Taplin literally amazed the Senate Banking and Currency Committee by revealing how he anticipated the market crash of 1929. He made the sale just a month before the crash. He said:

"I saw the storm coming. I was yellow and I was running. I wanted to unload and get out."

The Pennroad Corporation, which bought the stock, was created by the Pennsylvania Railroad with the financial support of Kuhn-Loeb & Co., to fight the giant Alleghany Corporation, which J. P. Morgan & Co. erected to expand the Van Sweringen rail empire.

Neither officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad nor of Kuhn-Loeb apparently foresaw the market crash, as did Taplin.

This story was brought out by Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, to show how the public paid the cost of a giant rail "war" between the Morgan and Kuhn-Loeb firms. Pecora said the Pennroad Corporation, after buying Taplin's control of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia, financed the deal by selling Pennroad stock

Aimee's Dave Shocked by Pajamas

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—(INS.)—"I am shocked, greatly shocked," commented David Hutton today when advised by Angelus Temple friends that his wife, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, had been seen disporting herself in flame-colored pajamas in a Paris hospital where she was reported to be recovering from an abdominal operation.

Hutton declared:

"I will make no effort to direct my wife's personal life, but just the same I am shocked."

Hutton discounted reports that his wife would remain in Paris and not return to America.

He said:

"I will only believe what I receive in cablegrams direct from my wife to me."

And Miss Harriett Jordan, temple business manager, said:

"Aimee is coming home as soon as she is able to travel."

U. S. Grand Jury Calls for Erk's Bank Records

EDMUND F. ERK

Former Congressman Erk, now Congressman Muldowney's secretary, whose bank records have been ordered before the federal grand jury investigating the election in which he lost.

ELECTION QUIZ BACK ON 'HILL'

Bank records and telephone calls of former Congressman Edmund F. Erk will be scanned by the federal grand jury in the vote fraud probe.

Subpenas were granted by Judge R. M. Gibson today on the Dollar Savings and Trust (North Side) branch of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, and on T. W. Friend, conservator of the National Bank of America, 709 East Ohio street, to produce all of Erk's bank records from September 1, 1932, to the present.

These include individual ledger accounts, canceled checks, drafts and vouchers signed or indorsed by Erk.

H. V. Blaxter, receiver of the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, also was subpenaed to bring in records of guest registrations and of local and long distance telephone calls made by Erk in the William Penn Hotel from November 1, 1932, to date.

Erk was before the grand jury for an hour yesterday. He is expected to return.

His apparent victory on the Republican ticket for Congress in the Thirtieth district was turned to defeat when invalidated ballots were thrown out. His opponent, Twing Brooks, Democrat, won the seat.

The probe temporarily swung back to the Thirty-second Congressional District during this morning's session. More than 100 witnesses, mostly voters of the Second and Third wards, testified.

U.S. TO PROBE COAL MINE EVICTIONS

Miss Perkins Acts at Once on Complaint Made by Fagan

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, today directed immediate investigation of the complaint of P. T. Fagan, of the United Mine Workers, that the Pittsburgh Coal Company is evicting employes who join the mine workers' union.

On receipt of Fagan's charges, Miss Perkins ordered that resources of the department be put behind the investigation. It was stated that a field investigator would bring the matter to the attention of coal company officials and inquire if coercive methods had been used, it was stated by officials of the Labor Department.

At the same time an investigation will be made through visitation to mining communities and the result of this inquiry will be available for Gen. Hugh S. Johnson when the bituminous coal industry code comes up for consideration before the Industrial Recovery Board.

Morrow Won't Talk On Logan Charges

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, today declined to comment on charges that his company is using evictions as a weapon against organized labor.

Complaints made by P. T. Fagan to the Federal Department of Labor and to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of national recovery, apparently caused no surprise to Pittsburgh Coal Company executives.

Fagan had charged the company with evicting families of members of the United Mine Workers.

Since 1925 the company has operated its mines open shop, and refused to deal with the unions.

Morrow recently has been active in organizing coal operators of Western and Central Pennsylvania, Northern West Virginia and Eastern Ohio to form a code dealing with wages and labor conditions as required by the National Recovery Act.

Gordon Rules On Closed Banks

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 6.—Dr. William D. Gordon, secretary of banking, today announced that state banks unlicensed here following the banking holiday will be placed in charge of deputy secretaries of banking unless they have prepared reorganization plans within six months after they restricted deposits under the Sordoni plan. The six-month period for most expires shortly after September 1.

It was learned from authoritative sources here today that few if any unlicensed state banks in Western Pennsylvania are expected to open before September 1. All reorganization plans must pass through the hands and meet the tentative approval of J. D. Swigart, chief banking examiner in Western Pennsylvania. Only five, it is understood, have been relayed to Harrisburg.

A number of time extensions will probably be granted to institutions attempting to reopen. Banks attempting to open for business, while paying but 50 per cent of their deposits may expect, it was learned, discouraging decisions from Mr. Gordon.

Otto H. Kahn, Ill, Sails for Europe

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—Otto H. Kahn, New York banker, who recently appeared as a witness before the Senate Subcommittee on Banking and Currency, and Henry L. Stimson were among the passengers who sailed last night on the liner Aquitania. Mrs. Kahn told reporters her husband was not feeling well and said he was going abroad to regain his strength.

'GIRL FRIDAY' WEDS HOOFER

By RUTH CAMBRIDGE (Herself)

NEW YORK, July 6.—Walter Winchell's "Girl Friday," Miss Ruth Cambridge, dutifully gave her boss an item yesterday.

Early on Independence Day she and C. L. (Buddy) Ebsen (hoofer extraordinary) slipped up to Harrison, N. Y., and swore off independence for life.

It wasn't bad enough that she works for a hoofer—she had to go and marry one!

Justice of the Peace Thomas Crotty performed the wedding ceremony in the presence of Nelson S. Hesse and Mrs. Vilma Dolan (the bridegroom's sister) after Town Clerk William Wilding had issued the marriage license.

Ruth apparently was being very quiet about the romance, but evidently at the last moment decided that her boss needed a punch line and offered this for the Winchell column:

"FLASH: Ruth Cambridge, My Girl Friday, and Buddy Ebsen were middle-aisled yesterday at Harrison, N. Y."

So the old master had another scoop!

A Pittsburgh girl, Ruth attended Carnegie Tech eight years ago.

Blaze Laid to Blast In Adjourning Building

The best efforts of the county prosecutor's office to shackle racket-tainted hands reaching out for the 3.2 beer business was pledged today by District Attorney Andrew T. Park.

The prosecutor made his statement as Uncle Sam seemed likely to cast an eye this way, and bombings and murder were laid at the door of the racketeers. Park said:

"All the resources of the county detectives are being used to run down any information on recent occurrences. Racketeers apparently are trying to establish a beer price. Our efforts will be to protect legitimate dealers."

BLAST PROBED

An explosion next door to a wholesale beer distributor's quarters in the East Liberty district early today led police to believe the blast may have been another racket outrage.

The district was shaken by the blast that destroyed a Station street dwelling, damaged an adjoining residence and forced three families to flee.

In the first floor of the building, to which the flames spread, Sam Fogel, Jr., conducts a grocery and wholesale beer distributing business, police said.

City Detectives Michael Tortorelli and Joseph Linden said they found evidence of gasoline and benzine in the ruins. They said an arrest would be made soon, but would not say whether they had evidence of a racket plot.

GAS SUSPECTED

Battalion Chief Fred S. Beckett and Police Capt. J. S. McFarland reported their investigation indicated the explosion was caused by gas. Battalion Chief Fred

Roosevelt Directing Recovery

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt took over the helm of his national recovery program in earnest today, going over the whole setup with Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas.

Douglas will insist states in which federal recovery projects are contemplated must first balance their budgets.

Douglas is at variance with the ideas of some officials in the recovery organization who feel large sums should be spent as quickly as possible. He holds no projects should be undertaken until they have been studied and found to be necessary, useful and sound. As he explained it, he wished to "see where we are going" before any actual project construction is begun.

(Other developments in the industrial recovery movement appear on pages 10 and 11.)

U. S. Restores 'Dead' World Parley To Life in Completely New Form

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

LONDON, July 6.—A new program of work, designed to enable the World Economic Conference to preserve the fiction of continued existence, was unanimously adopted tonight by the steering committee.

The committee adopted a draft resolution embodying an entirely new agenda for the conference.

This means that the parley will continue in a new form, differing in many ways from the purposes for which it was originally assembled.

The committee summoned the full conference bureau to meet on Monday to consider the resolution, which represented a compromise between the gold bloc nations of continenal Europe and the United States and Great Britain, which agreed in demanding postponement of the currency stabilization problem.

The compromise represented a victory for Secretary of State Cordell Hull, chief of the American delegation. Acting under orders from President Roosevelt, he spent the entire day in attempting to convince the steering committee that complete adjournment of the conference was out of the question.

He insisted there was much valuable economic work to be done even though currency stabilization could not be discussed, and stressed the baneful effect upon public opinion if the parley recessed until October, as demanded by the gold nations.

Full told International News Service:

"The conference will continue. Both the monetary and economic commissions will remain in session. The gold nations have reserved the right not to participate in monetary discussions."

State Inquiry Scans Data on Closed Banks

HARRISBURG, July 6.—(AP.)—Legislative investigation into administration of closed banks was resumed today with scrutiny of a mass of exhibits submitted by the banking department.

The investigators plan to call Dr. William D. Gordon, Secretary of Banking, and others for questioning on the department's policies in handling closed institutions.

There was considerable speculation as to what line of attack the committee would adopt.

Much of last month's hearing was devoted to questioning Dr. Gordon about a letter sent by his department to closed banks seeking information on loans negotiated with them by members of the committee and Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman.

Expressing regret the letter had been sent and asserting he had not ordered it transmitted, Gordon said the motive behind the inquiry was to show the department was not "playing politics" in its handling of closed banks. He said it was intended to prove that political figures were given the same treatment as others.

AMERICA PREPARES BIG UPHEAVAL IN FOREIGN POLICIES

WILL ABANDON EFFORTS IN EUROPE

U. S. to Center Its Plans in Orient, South America

By PAUL C. YATES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—A tremendous shift of American foreign policy, world-wide in its ramifications, was anticipated in well-informed Washington circles today.

The United States was seen as ready to transfer its centers of foreign diplomatic effort to Latin America, the Orient and Russia, leaving European nations to stew in their own juice.

President Roosevelt's blunt-spoken message to the world economic parley, described by European critics as "a new declaration of American independence," fitted with prophetic fidelity into a pattern of predictions made by some of his close friends on Capitol Hill.

These predictions were that the Chief Executive, although perfectly willing to meet with European statesmen on a give-and-take basis, had determined not to permit a repetition of past international conferences at which America "lost its shirt."

The President was represented as being out of patience with European efforts to wring further concesions from this country without yielding anything in return.

Among the developments were a huge naval building program involving more than $313,000,000 during the next two years; a policy of rapproachment toward Latin American countries; and preliminary moves looking toward diplomatic and greatly increased trade relations with Russia.

U. S. Scans Policy On Red Recognition

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—The United States is going to make an official study of the problems involved in recognition of Soviet Russia.

Today, Lawrence Steinhardt, minister to Sweden, starts to Europe for that study. The announcement of his specific mission was made at the White House. Many held it added force to arguments that America's more friendly relations might bring official recognition of the land of Communism.

When Steinhardt begins his survey, he will find Russian debts and propaganda activities heading reasons for nonrecognition in the past.

After the last Czar was overthrown, the United States extended an $187,000,000 credit to the provisional government which took over. That was repudiated along with around $400,000,000 of czarist obligations held by American citizens. The provisional government floated an additional $86,000,000 in bonds which also were defaulted.

Russia, now, may offer to do something about these debts.

DAVIS MAY NOT GO TO EUROPE

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(INS.)—Norman H. Davis, America's roving ambassador, may not return to Europe to participate in the informal disarmament conversations planned between now and the next meeting of the Disarmament Conference in September, it was officially stated today at the State Department.

A high department official announced it was possible Davis would not sail for six weeks or so. He explained this government was uncertain as to whether the informal disarmament conversations would be sufficiently important for Davis to go back.

Apparently not all the crime has been on the side of the racketeers. "Respectable" business men hired them willingly to intimidate and ruin competitors.

Drop of Dollar Empties Gay Paree of Americans

PARIS, July 6.—(AP.)—Americans in France, hard hit by the economic crisis and the fall of the dollar value, are streaming homeward. The existence of some American institutions in this country is threatened by the sharp reductions in income.

All activities of the Methodist Episcopal Church in France, excepting the Chateau Thierry Memorial, will be dropped August 1, Morris M. Ennis, treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions announced today.

Five churches, three schools and a community center will be closed.

Fifteen hundred Paris Americans have returned to the United States since January 1, the American consulate estimates. The census showed 13,463 Americans resident here at the beginning of the year, or nearly half the peak of post-war population.

The tourist centers of one-time "Gay Paree" are yawning emptily. Consulate registrations indicate a 15 per cent decrease in American tourist traffic for the months of April, May and June as compared with the same period last year when the crisis already had cut the number of such visitors in half.

Unemployment among Americans is growing, with American business houses reducing staffs as much as one-third.

STARS IN GAME AT CHICAGO

MANAGERS ARRIVE LATE

John McGraw, drawn out of retirement to lead the National forces, and shrewd old Connie Mack held a council of war with their stars in separate hotels and then took their time about arriving at the scene of action.

McGraw was a real fashion plate attired in a brown sack suit and straw hat. He grinned as he displayed a score card.

Joe McCarthy, manager of the world championship Yankees, sat on the American League "home club" bench ready to assist Connie in the master minding.

Bill Walker, Cardinal southpaw, tossed 'em up for the dazzling array of National League stars as they took their turn at batting practice. Chuck Klein, of Philadelphia, was the first to ram one of Bill's slants out of the park. Chick Hafey, Cincinnati's bespectacled outfield star, duplicated the blow. Others were satisfied to smash hard balls through the infield.

Connie Mack arrived togged in his usual blue serge suit and waving the inevitable score card.

NO TICKETS AVAILABLE

So great was the demand for tickets that thousands charged around the entrances willing to pay any price for a seat selling for $1.10 or a box seat costing $1.65. Speculators had no trouble in getting rid of box seats at $10 apiece, while the cheaper seats were snapped up at $5.

All seats were sold three days ago, and there were no box offices open at the ball park. The unlucky ones couldn't even climb a tree or a telegraph pole in the vicinity of Comiskey Park because there were no trees or poles to climb.

Waves of applause swept the park as the announcer shouted the names of the National Leaguers as they engaged in a fast fielding practice. Gabby Hartnett was catching, Bill Terry at first, Frankie Frisch at second, Dick Bartell at short and Pie Traynor at third. In the outfield were Lefty O'Doul, Chuck Klein and Paul Waner.

Babe Ruth, after making his appearance in the ever shifting panorama of stars, sat himself down in the American League dugout. Ruth took no interest in the proceedings, to him it was just another ball game.

Mack, the American League manager, didn't go near his players until just a few minutes before the game started. He remained away from the dugout, causing the American League stars to wonder where he was.

MARTIN IS CHEERED

John Leonard (Pepper) Martin, of the St. Louis Cardinals, the hero of the 1931 world series, received a great cheer. As they went through their practice, the stars were announced through amplifiers.

The American Leaguers lined up for fielding drill with Lou Gehrig at first base, Charley Gehringer, of Detroit, at second; Joe Cronin, manager of the Washington Senators, at shortstop, and Jimmy Foxx, at third. Eddie Collins, vice president and general manager of the Boston Red Sox, one of Mack's coaches for the day, batted to the infielders.

Connie Mack surprised the throng by sending Lefty Gomez, star southpaw of the world championship Yankees to the mound, while McGraw, back in the all-star game for a day, countered with Wild Bill Hallahan, ace left hander of the St. Louis Cardinals. Gabby Hartnett, of the Cubs, caught Hallahan, while Rick Ferrell, long distance clouter, completed a Yankee battery.

The game in detail:

FIRST INNING

NATIONAL LEAGUE — Martin grounded out, Cronin to Gehrig. Frisch went out the same way. Cronin made a fine running, one-handed catch of Klein's short fly.

AMERICAN LEAGUE — Both managers shuffled their lineups at the last minute. Jimmy Wilson went to catch for the Nationals and Pepper Martin went to third. Cronin was thrown out by Martin. Gehringer was the first player to reach base, drawing a walk with a 3-and-2 count as Bill's pitch zoomed in above his neck. The crowd roared as Ruth came to bat. After feeding the Bambino three straight balls, Hallahan got him with three straight strikes, the last one called. On the last strike Gehringer stole second. Gehrig was out, Terry to Hallahan, who covered first. One left.

Monongahela Banks To Pay Out $186,000

MONONGAHELA, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—Money tied up in two banks will be parceled out to depositors on July 24 on authorization announced today by the State Banking Commissioner and the Washington County courts.

The Monongahela City Trust Company will issue its third dividend amounting to 7 per cent, and Alexander Company, a private bank under control of the courts, will pay a 5 per cent dividend. Approximately $186,000 is involved.

GUFFEY, FARLEY TALK JOBS

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Pennsylvania patronage was being discussed today while State Democratic Leader Joseph F. Guffey accompanied Postmaster General James A. Farley to Greensboro, N. C., for the dedication of a new postoffice building. On their return, announcement of several Keystone State appointments was anticipated.

"Deserving Democrats" impatient for postmasterships now held by Republicans who have unexpired terms to run from six months to two years must wait. It has been learned that the administration is not disposed to displace postmasters who have good records and the policy toward long-term incumbents has not been fixed.

TAPLIN ADMITS BIG PENNROAD PROFIT

to the public. So, in the end, he said, the public bore the cost.

PROFITABLE IDEA

Pecora drew from Taplin a complete picture of how a smart young man got an idea and managed it into a huge profit. Taplin first told of forming a syndicate that bought 73 per cent of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia's outstanding stock in 1923.

He got agreements from every member of the syndicate, empowering him to sell all their stock whenever he saw fit.

Under Taplin's management, the syndicate held its control from 1923 until a month before the crash of 1929. Then he sold it at a profit of more than $20,000,000 on an original investment of $37,898,130. Taplin even explained that some members of the syndicate had never paid the full cost of their stock.

He said $12,500,000 was needed to help the syndicate members to pay for their stock in full in order to deliver it to the Pennroad Corporation.

Taplin revealed that Frank H. Ginn, a member of the syndicate, was an attorney for the Van Sweringen railroad interests, the rivals of the Pennroad Corporation. Ginn held 1,097 shares in the syndicate.

Taplan was asked whether he acquired the Pittsburgh and West Virginia stock "to sell it to the Pennsylvania railroad."

Taplin said:

"No. There were what we called four trunk lines, the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and the Van Sweringens. It was my thought it would be attractive to any one of the four."

STOCK OWNERS

A list of owners of the 222,930 shares of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia sold to Pennroad, as submitted by Taplin, follows:

William C. Atwater, 13,650; R. B. Brown, 549; E. W. Backus, 4,740; F. A. Bushnell, 650; L. P. Crecelius, 50; T. B. Davis, 3,000; E. M. Ford, 500; A. H. Ferbert, 219; Adam Gross, 549; F. H. Abolish County Government

WE HAVE too much government and too many government employes.

In any enumeration of the sources of the troubles through which we are passing, almost the first place must be given to the appalling enlargement of government, with the unceasing multiplication of political place-holders and useless functionaries—like some hideous form of fatty degeneration on a national scale.

We have reached the point where half the community is in public office and the other half is supporting them.

THIS IS INTOLERABLE. IT IS GROTESQUE. IT THREATENS TO DESTROY THE COUNTRY.

IT MUST BE STOPPED!

The resultant burden of taxation is without precedent in the history of civilization. It has crushed the American farmer and bankrupted the owner of real estate in our cities. It has made tax liens worthless and gravely impaired the essential social services, both state and municipal, upon which public health, order and security depend.

Our whole framework of government, both state and local, is absurdly distended—rickety, filled with duplications and overlappings, ruinously costly and absurdly inefficient.

Innumerable consolidations could be effected with vast savings in expenditure and immeasurable gains in efficiency.

STATE GOVERNMENTS are doubtless necessary and so are city governments, but OUR COUNTY GOVERNMENTS COULD BE GREATLY REDUCED in number and cost burden through merger or complete elimination. They are altogether unnecessary.

The position of our states, relatively to the central government, corresponds closely with that of the English counties. What possible occasion can there be for a lot of sub-counties which do nothing but create needless expense?

With any intelligence of organization, our state constabularies and city police should be all that we require for effective law enforcement. And yet in every state there are innumerable law enforcement bodies and an immense amount of useless legislative and executive machinery created for the ostensible purpose of aiding law enforcement. As a matter of fact they contribute nothing to that end. All this useless machinery should be eliminated entirely.

There should be a drastic reduction in the membership of both Congress and the state legislatures. Constituted as at present, they are cumbersome and inefficient. Crookedness and corruption are rife and the human standard is low.

WITH THE reduction in personnel which would automatically result from the consolidation of needless districts into more important and larger districts, the tone and capacity of our representatives would be greatly improved.

The broadening and diversification of the interests and responsibilities confided to each representative would call for a higher intelligence. It would soon be found that we had made a great advance in the type of our representatives and in their qualifications for public service.

THESE ARE DAYS OF SEARCHING SELF-SCRUTINY. The old order is passing. The days of the political hack and the political parasite are over.

Our people are no longer indifferent to corruption, to excessive taxation, to obvious waste, to incompetence on the part of elected representatives and public servants.

Rigorous, thorough, relentless reform is the spirit of the new time.

Our whole government should be made compact and competent.

HINT HARRIMAN SANITY TEST

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—It was learned at the Federal Building today that counsel for Joseph W. Harriman, who is awaiting trial for alleged misuse of the funds of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, are planning to ask the court to appoint a commission to determine Harriman's mental state.

The Harriman trial is to be called as soon as another case is completed.

Hagen Keeps Golf Lead; Mrs. Moody Gains Net Final

Walter Hagen today retained his lead in the British Open golf championship at St. Andrews, Scotland, by adding a 72, one under par, to his 68 of yesterday. His 36-hole total of 140 is one stroke better than that of Ed Dudley, American pro, who added a 71 to his first-round 70.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody today advanced to within one match of her sixth Wimbledon tennis championship as she defeated Hilda Krahwinkel, of Germany, 6-4, 6-3, in their semi-final round duel.

Dorothy Round, ranked second in England, qualified to meet Mrs. Moody in the final by defeating Helen Jacobs, American champion, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

American Family 'Stands Pat' in Depression

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—In hard times Americans tended to stand pat on their domestic relationships.

Most of those who were married stayed married; most of those who were single stayed single.

The story is told in figures collected by the Census Bureau through 1932. Only 7.87 new marital unions were effected for each 1,000 population. It was the first time in 21 years the number of marriages fell below the million mark—there were 981,759.

Similarly, divorces dropped from 4.9 per cent in 1930 to 4.1 per cent in 1932.

Scot Urges 'Liquidating' U. S. Debt With Rum

LONDON, July 6. — (AP.)—Laughter today greeted the suggestion of a Scotch member of the House of Commons that a large part of Europe's debt to America might be liquidated by payments in kind, namely shipments of wine and whisky.

F. A. MacQuisten started things by asking if Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had considered the possibility of Great Britain and France offering to liquidate the debts to America "by the delivery of commodities which the latter do not themselves possess but which are in great demand in the United States."

After Maj. Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary for the Treasury, speaking for Mr. Chamberlain, had soberly replied that the Chancellor would take note of the suggestion, MacQuisten persisted.

He asked if it was not notorious that "there is in France an immense stock of wine and in Scotland an immense stock of Scotch whisky" that could advantageously be passed over to the United States and "that we could liquidate a lot of our debts in that way."

The remark drew laughter which was renewed when Maj. Hore-Belisha replied.

"I now understand what the member means by 'liquidating' debts.'"

AID DRY REPEAL, ROOSEVELT TO ASK SOUTH

Direct Plea to Three Pivotal States Planned

By JOHN A. KENNEDY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—President Roosevelt is planning a direct appeal to the South to vote for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

His plea will take the form of messages to the Democratic national committeemen for the three pivotal dry states—Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee—where the voters go to the polls two weeks hence.

The President has been importuned by political leaders to make a radio address on the subject on Sunday night, July 16, but this plan has been discarded, it was said.

Instead he will answer telegrams sent to the White House by the three national committeemen with a clear statement of the administration position on the subject, in line with the Democratic platform on which the party rode to victory last November.

The President regards the three states as holding the fate of early repeal of prohibition. If all three or even two go wet, he is represented to believe the Twenty-first Amendment will be added to the constitution this year.

Already 16 states, with a population of 50,000,000, have voted against prohibition.

Farley Urges Laffoon To Act on Repeal

GREENSBORO, N. C., July 6.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley, here for an address today, said he had telegraphed Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, asking that the question of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment be included in the Governor's proposed call for a special session of the Kentucky Legislature to impose a state tax on beer.

Farley, who also is chairman of the Democratic National Committee, came to North Carolina today to dedicate new federal buildings here and at High Point in an address here he reiterated his position that the amendment should be repealed and control of the liquor traffic left to the individual states.

CHURCH WINES BAN EASED

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(INS.)—In a fourth drastic relaxation of restrictions against the legitimate use of alcoholics, the Department of Justic and Treasury lifted restrictions on distribution of sacramental wine.

Each adult may now draw two instead of one gallon of sacramental wine for a year's use, while the family limitation was raised from five to 10 gallons.

Formerly, church officials were charged with the responsibility of dispensing sacramental wine for home use. This restriction was dropped and members of the congregation may make their purchases directly from the distributor, or winery.

Permits are issued for 90 days instead of 30. Church officials are not required to get receipts for liquors they issue to congregations although they must keep a record showing the name and address of the person receiving the liquor.

GIRL IN FEAR OF ATTACKER

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 6.—Refusal of Mary Kibalak, 16, schoolgirl, to name the man who attacked her early yesterday is hampering the probe, police said today.

To Justice of the Peace L. W. Carson, the victim said:

"He said he would kill me and our family if I said anything. He is a bad actor and I know he will do it. He is just hiding now, but he would come back and shoot us if I told."

Justice Carson and Constable Joseph Andrews have been searching for a man on a tip given by Private Detective Frank Galloway, who said he obtained the license number of the car in which the girl was attacked.

BALBO AWAITS CLEAR SKY FOR PERILOUS LABRADOR HOP

ARMADA BRAVES RAIN LANDING IN ICELAND

Fliers Prepare Planes For Fourth Leg of Flight to U. S.

International News Service.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, July 6.—Desiring only the most favorable weather for the most difficult leg of the Italian seaplane armada's trans-Atlantic flight, Gen. Italo Balbo, commander of the expedition, today ordered an indefinite delay of the departure for Cartwright, Labrador, 1,500 miles across the North Atlantic.

Unless there is an unforeseen development in the weather conditions, Balbo said, the 24 planes will not take off for several days.

His fliers spent the morning checking the ships' motors and the general strain on thep lanes undergone on the first three legs of the flight from Orbetello, Italy, which is to end in Chicago.

Describing the third leg of the flight, Gen. Balbo said today:

"The most thrilling moment of yesterday's flight occurred when unexpected banks of 'snow' turned out to be the cliffs of Reykjavik."

FLIERS FEAST HEARTILY

The Italian air ministry supplied the hotel here, where the airmen are stopping, with large amounts of spaghetti and Chianti wine on which the fliers feasted heartily.

The hop to Labrador will take the seaplanes, flying in formation, over the most dangerous portion of the North Atlantic.

In the event the planes fail to reach Labrador without a stop, a base has been prepared at Italiahaab, Greenland, where the armada may find shelter.

The armada arrived here yesterday after a seven-hour flight from Londonderry, Northern Ireland. All planes landed without mishap.

Led by Gen. Italo Balbo, the fleet of 24 seaplanes bored its way through clouds and rain shrouding Iceland's coast to land on the narrow fjord at Vatnagardar, near here, yesterday. It covered the 930-mile hop across the treacherous North Atlantic from Londonderry, Northern Ireland, in six hours and 35 minutes.

THOUSANDS SEE LANDING

Hardly had the planes arrived and taxied to their mooring buoys, when launches shot out from the shore to refuel their hungry gasoline tanks.

Thousands of Reykjavik's 30,000 inhabitants blackened the shore line at Vatnagardar yesterday as the air fleet, a two-mile long ribbon of machines and men began unrolling out of the eastern horizon. They cheered themselves hoarse as the Italian air minister's lead plane dropped down to the sheltered bay water.

Twenty minutes after Balbo's plane had hit the water his entire fleet was moored to its buoys.

PLANE RACES COME TO END

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—(AP.)—Skippers of the winged motors which have been roaring over the municipal airport for five days will make their last attempts today to annihilate time in postponed events of the national air races.

A ruling of the contest committee, holding that Col. Roscoe Turner technically violated the rules in the 100-mile closed course race Tuesday, gave to the New Orleans pilot, Jimmie Wedell, victory in the event and top prize money.

Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic flier, late last night postponed an attempt to set a new transcontinental speed record for her sex until tonight. Ruth Nichols, of Rye, N. Y., society aviatrix, may take off on a similar attempt at the same time.

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—The American air races were over today with two new unofficial speed records established by a pair of pilots flashed through space at rates of 242.34 and 183.86 miles an hour in tiny planes.

They are Johnny Livingston, Aurora, Ill., and Jack Wright, Utica, N. Y.

Russell Thaw Hops On New York Flight

INDIANAPOLIS, July 6.—(AP.)—Russell Thaw, young New York aviator who was forced out of the New York to Los Angeles air derby here last Saturday when a wing of his airplane was damaged in making a landing, took off for New York this morning.

THE STATION STREET DWELLING WRECKED BY A BLAST THAT SHOOK EAST LIBERTY TODAY ..... FLAMES SPREAD TO THE ADJOINING BUILDING

Park to Begin Fight Against Beer Racket

Children Periled In Blast Laid To 'War'

Zollinger estimated the damage at $10,000.

When firemen arrived at the residence of John Hinkele, 6240 Station street, they found the three-story building in flames. Hinkele, with his family, went to West Virginia Sunday, police said they were told. Since going there a baby has been born to Mrs. Hinkele.

The flames spread to the three-story frame and brick building at 6242 Station street, occupied by Fogel, his wife, Minerva, and their son, William, 2; J. W. Miller, his wife, Louise, and their children, Mary Ellen, 4, and Louise, 11, and Sidney Thomas and his wife, Sarah.

SAVES CHILDREN

Miller, who lives on the second floor, carried his children from the bedroom to the porch roof and lowered them to August Kletke, 34 Fornoff street, a spectator. Miller's four dogs were lowered to safety by the same route.

According to residents in the vicinity the flames were preceded by a terrific blast. The ruins were to be examined by police and the city department of building inspection today.

Hinkele moved into the Station street house two months ago from Penn avenue, according to the police. He left the building in charge of an East Liberty realty company, police reported.

Hilltop Man's Slaying Blamed on Feud

Detectives planned to delve into the affairs of Luigi Impellicieri today for a clue to the gunman who shot him to death in his Blue Arch Beer Garden, Southern avenue, Mt. Washington, yesterday.

Four persons taken into custody for questioning were released yesterday on their own recognizance by Lieut. Frank Ferris, who scouted reports linking the killing to Pittsburgh's beer war which flared over the holiday with a bomb threat sent to a Brereton avenue beer distributor. The four were ordered to appear for further questioning at the Coroner's office today.

Ferris said he was convinced the murder climaxed a personal feud. He had questioned Mamie Cignot, 31, a waitress at the beer garden; Alfred Scarfo, 36, and his wife, Frances Scarfo, 26, of 22 Kuhn street, and Pasquale Romano, 36, of West Main street, Carnegie. The homicide squad head was hopeful that a check of the victim's private life would yield a clue to the killer.

Joseph B. Keenan, newly appointed assistant to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, apprised of the racketeers' attempt to dominate in the legitimate beer business in the city, said he would discuss the matter with his superiors when he assumes his duties on Friday.

Impellicieri apparently had been called to the door of his place by his assissin, according to Ferris' reconstruction of the crime. From a double-barreled gun two shots were fired through the screen door, one passing through the victim's body and the other lodging in the ceiling.

Fire Destroys Home Of O. Henry's Widow

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 6.—(AP.)—The home of Mrs. William Sydney Porter, widow of the short story writer, O. Henry, was destroyed by fire yesterday.

The 100-year-old house, situated near Weaverville, was burned to the ground within 30 minutes after the blaze was discovered. Several special editions of O. Henry's works were saved.

EXPECT FACTOR RELEASE TODAY

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—New hope that John Factor, kidnaped speculator, may be released some time soon, possibly today, came to his friends early this morning.

A cryptic statement from his secretary, Leon Bleet, was responsible for the optimism, in that it led observers to believe that carefully guarded negotiations for the payment of ransom for the missing man's release were under way, and would be completed today.

Bleet had been missing from the Factor quarters in a downtown hotel during the night, but upon his return he was asked if any progress could be announced. He replied:

"Not now, nothing now. But after the banks open there should be a different story to tell."

Previously some of Factor's friends had expressed fear for his safety. His son, Jerome, shared the apprehension, and said he thought a telephone message recently received demanding $75,000 was a fake.

Factor was captured by a gang of men last Saturday after he had left an outlying roadhouse.

Outboard Motor On Lindy Plane

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—One of the pontoons of the seaplane in which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh plan to fly to Greenland was being equipped yesterday with an outboard motor.

The motor will enable the Lindberghs to maneuver their ship more easily on the water. Lindbergh was scheduled to inspect the plane at College Point, Queens, today.

Nettie Dons Widow's Weeds, Asks 'Break'

Squire Morgan Not Satisfied with Plea, Continues Hearing

All the shy little woman in mourning needs is a break — a break for Nettie Gordon, the former Republican committeewoman, who is the queen of something or other on the North Side.

Net's attorney, Louis Little, pleaded for his client and nine other women in a hearing last night before Squire Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley. After contending there was no evidence to link Nettie with the operation of a house in Plush way, he declared:

"I want your honor and the newspapers to give us a break here."

HEARING CONTINUED

But Squire Morgan continued the hearing until tomorrow, when she said she'll produce a real estate man to testify as to who paid the rent for the spot.

The other women were held for court as inmates, the 10 men, arrested when state police raided the place, forfeited $25 bonds by failing to appear.

One Belle Jones insisted she operated the place, but Squire Morgan wasn't convinced.

DRESSED IN BLACK

Nettie was dressed in black. To conceal her features from newspaper photographers she wore a veil and carried a fan.

One of the spectators, the crusading North Side minister, the Rev. Ray E. Snodgrass, who has been criticizing the police for inactivity, asserted:

"If I conducted such a court I'd change things. I'd remove the newspaper photographers and first I'd have the defendant identified. I'd eliminate the smoking. I don't think such hearings should be conducted for entertainment. However, I understand it is difficult to do this in a hearing before a justice."

PICTURE WINS ORPHAN HOME

PATERSON, N. J., July 6.—(AP.)—A home with a wealthy silk dyer and such advantages as a college education are in store for a 13-year-old orphan boy from Omaha, Neb.

The boy is Peter Christopolis, an inmate of Father Flanagan's Boys' Home near Omaha.

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Strengs, who live here, saw the picture of Peter and were struck by the resemblance to their son, Henry, who drowned in Green Pond, N. J., a little over a year ago.

As a result, arrangements were made to bring Peter into the Strengs household to take the place of the dead boy.

Peter packed his few belongings at the orphan home yesterday, in preparations for the trip planned to begin today. He said:

"It seems like a dream, and I'm afraid I'll wake up."

FIND GIRL SLAIN WITH NOOSE

ELMIRA, N. Y., July 6.—(AP.)—The body of a woman, about 25 years old, her head crushed and strangled with a noose of rope, was found today on the outskirts of the city within 25 feet of a main highway.

Coroner Charles S. Bole said she had been killed by a heavy instrument and dragged through the bushes bordering the highway by the rope about her neck.

RICH PHYSICIAN SLAIN, SHERIFF DECLARES

Mystery Death Quiz Awaits Laboratory Analysis

IRONTON, O., July 6.—(AP.)—Sheriff E. W. Bennett said last night he was "absolutely certain" that Dr. J. W. Lowry was murdered. His statement came a few hours after J. E. Schneider, a Chesapeake (O.) undertaker, disclosed that Lowry's chest and abdominal organs had been removed in preparing the body for burial, after the wealthy political leader and physician was found dead in his bed at his home here on May 25.

The organs were sent to a Columbus laboratory for analysis along with larynx and head tissues. The results of the analysis are expected Friday or Saturday.

Meanwhile the Sheriff said the investigation would continue on a theory that Lowry was a victim of murder. While "no one in particular" is suspected, Bennett said a postmortem failed to show that Lowry died of natural causes.

Authorities were startled yesterday when they removed the body from a mausoleum and found the chest and abdominal cavities stuffed with excelsior. Explaining, Schneider said the condition of the body when found May 25 made it necessary to remove the organs in embalming.

Authorities broke into the burial vault yesterday when they were unable to reach Dr. Lowry's nearest relatives, Mrs. Alice Lowry Barger, a sister, and her son, Clark Barger. Later they learned Mrs. Lowry had been visiting in Rainelle, W. Va. She will come here at once, it was announced, to aid in the investigation.

SEEK 2 IN DEPOT MASSACRE

KANSAS CITY, July 6.—(AP.)—E. C. Reppert, director of police, announced today Verne C. Miller, a former Sheriff of North Dakota, and William Weissman, of Kansas City, were sought as the identified killers of four officers and their prisoner, Frank Nash, a bank robber, in front of the Union Station here June 17. Miller is wanted in several cities for other crimes, Reppert said.

The police head announced the massacre resulted when officers defied Miller's attempt to rescue Nash as he was being transferred from train to motor car on his way to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

A nation-wide search has been instituted by the police and the United States Bureau of Investigation for Miller and Weissman, a brother of Solly Weissman, Kansas City gangster who was killed here a few years ago.

Linoleum-Eating Girl Baffles Doctors

KINGSTON, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—A 2-year-old girl, whose name is kept a secret by puzzled physicians, is in a hospital because of an unusual appetite for anything painted.

Physicians said the child prefers linoleum, legs of tables and woodwork generally.

She was brought to the hospital suffering from lead poisoning.

Attendants said at first she refused all normal food and chewed off the leg of a painted doll.

Physicians asserted the child's trouble was traced partially to "pica," or an abnormal appetite. They expect her ultimately to acquire a taste for an ordinary diet.

JOBLESS PAIR FACE JAIL IN LOVE TRADE

Lose Son for Whom Man Gave Up Wife To Another

NEWARK, N. J., July 6.—(INS.)—Love for their 4-year-old son today led Raymond Parks, 26, and his pretty wife, Lillian, to a police court and possible jail sentence and the probability that they would lose the boy for whom they gave up each other.

Raymond, Jr., needed both food and medical aid his jobless father could not provide. So Parks decided there was "only one way out," and he told his wife:

"You're young and pretty. It's tough to think of, but why not go to some other man—one who's got money and wants you—and be a sort of 'adopted' wife? He'd take care of the baby, too."

WIFE YIELDS

Mrs. Parks revolted at first. But the child became worse. So a few days later she moved with her son into the apartment of Frank Coffey, a former admirer.

Coffey knew the Parkses had agreed on the move, but he stipulated Parks should have no more contact with his wife.

Then Parks got a job. He began to visit his wife secretly, giving her part of his $8 weekly wages to buy little luxuries for their son.

ARRESTS DEMANDED

One day when he came, Lillian had a present—a new suit. Parks refused it, claiming Raymond, Jr. needed things more. Coffey returned home that night, found the suit and upbraided Mrs. Parks for violating her agreement to sever relations with her husband. He went to police headquarters and demanded her arrest on a statutory charge.

Reminded he was equally guilty, he agreed to arrest on the same charge. Then Parks was arrested for violation of the child welfare law.

Today, all three will be sentenced by Judge Carl Duveneck. Meantime, welfare authorities sought a home for Raymond, Jr., taken from his parents because of their inability to support him.

GIRL ACCUSES BALLPLAYER

CHICAGO, July 6.—(INS.)—Miss Lillian Eloise Mitchell, pretty 22-year-old brunette from Winston-Salem, N. C., was cross-examined in Circuit Court today in her $50,000 damage suit against Harley Boss, first baseman for the Cleveland Indians.

Miss Mitchell has testified Boss invited her to his Cleveland apartment and entertained her, but struck her, blacking her eye, when she attempted to leave.

Two teammates of Boss, Sammy Hale and Frank Pytlak, called while she was in the apartment and brought beer, Miss Mitchell testified. After they had gone she also sought to leave, she testified, but Boss said:

"Oh, no, no."

She declared:

"Then he tried to attack me. I screamed and he hit me with his fist."

Pytlak testified everything was "very proper" while he was present.

Weather Conditions.

The eastern high is centered over West Virginia Kentucky and Eastern Tennessee, moving slowly into the Southeast. It covers most of the eastern half of the country, and is attended by mostly clear skies and nearly normal temperature. Low pressure is dominating the weather over the West, resulting in considerable cloudiness and light scattered showers and thunderstorms. Temperature changes were slight since yesterday morning, and there were no high maximum temepratures yesterday except over Texas and northward over the plains to North Dakota. The tropical storm is approaching the Texas coast. The barometer at Roanoke is 29.64 inches this morning, with 20 miles of wind from the north and raining.

HITLER REGIME ASSAILED IN BRITAIN

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service.

LONDON, July 6.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, former British Foreign Secretary, yesterday led a scathing attack on Chancellor Hitler and the "New Germany" in the House of Commons.

Perhaps not since the denunciations of the Soviet government has a foreign government been so criticized and assailed in Commons.

It was charged that Hitler and Germany are a menace to the peace of Europe and the world, and that the military spirit of Germany is the chief barrier to realization of practical disarmament.

Attacking Germany's Jewish policy, Chamberlain said:

"Could we really be friendly with a nation which proscribes a race within its own borders on racial grounds and refuses to treat its own citizens as equals?"

BRUENING TO RETIRE

BERLIN, July 6.—(AP.)—The retirement of former Chancellor Heinrich Bruening from the political scene, in much the same way as his Catholic Center party left the field to Nazi dominance, was expected today in some quarters.

Centrist Parliament members were semi-officially said to be willing to become hospitants or affiliates of the Hitlerites, but one source said the veteran Bruening would not follow such a course.

When the 63-year-old Center party followed other political groups in dissolution yesterday Reichstag members of the party were allowed to retain their mandates without joining the Nazis as were the legislators of other non-Nazi parties, but nevertheless reports persisted that their leaders would leave political life.

Nazi Suicide Plot Charged by Paper

VIENNA, July 6.—(AP.)—The official government newspaper Wiener Zeitung quotes Minister of Justice Schuschnigg as saying that evidence had been discovered that the Nazis are carrying on propaganda among prospective suicides to persuade them to combine death with terroristic acts and thus pass out "heroically."

This allegation is republished with banner headlines in the afternoon press.

Arizona Governor's Recall Demanded

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 6.—(AP.)—B. B. Moeur, the doctor who became a Governor, was the subject of a recall action today as workers circulated petitions in the 14 counties of the state at the instance of unidentified sponsors of the movement.

The petitions asserted the Governor (a Democrat) was "incompetent, inefficient and wholly unqualified to perform the duties" of his office. Circulators said they were being paid 10 cents a signature.

Saves Self, Mother From Blazing Auto

TOPEKA, Kan., July 6.—(AP.)—Raymond Haskell, 22, college student from Marion, Ind., today saved his mother from death in their burning automobile after a collision with another motor car near Rossville.

The Haskell car collided with one driven by W. J. Dalrymple, of Lawrence, Kan., turned over several times and caught fire. Haskell extricated himself and his mother, Mrs. George Haskell. The car was destroyed. Mrs. Haskell, severely injured, was treated in a Topeka hospital.

WISE PROPOSES JEWISH FLIGHT

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—Dr. Stephen S. Wise, honorary president of the American Jewish Congress, believes that if "there is no recession from the Hitler oppression" a movement to bring the Jewish population out of Germany should be started.

Sailing to Europe to confer with Jewish leaders yesterday, Dr. Wise said that in the event the Jews must vacate Germany, Palestine "must become their port of refuge."

Samuel Untermyer, in a statement issued on the eve of his departure for London, called for a world-wide boycott of German goods.

Declaring the Hitler regime was a "challenge to all civilization and humanity, regardless of race or creed," the lawyer said:

"Today it is aimed at the helpless Jew; tomorrow it will be the Catholic, and then the Protestant churches, the assaults upon whose integrity and independence have already begun."

AUSTRIA FILES NAZI PROTEST

VIENNA, July 6.—(AP.)—It was officially announced today that the Austrian Minister at Berlin has been instructed to protest to Chancellor Hitler against the anti-Austrian broadcasts of the radio station at Munich.

The latest broadcast from Munich was by Theo Habicht, who was recently expelled from Austria as the result of his activities as representative of German Nazis. It aroused angry denunciations in the Vienna press.

Irritation in government circles here was increased by Berlin's official repudiation of the so-called peace overture in yesterday's Aussenpolitische Korrespondenz, which the official Austrian press bureau distributed verbatim to newspapers as a semi-official German utterance.

LOAN BODY CAN TAKE OVER 2 MORTGAGES

(This is the eighth of a series of articles discussing the home owners' loan act of 1933 and explaining the procedure necessary for individuals to take advantage of federal assistance to protect the ownership of their homes).

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

In many cases home owners who wish to take advantage of the assistance available from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation have properties on which there are both first and second mortgages. This complicates the procedure necessary to transfer the obligation to the newly-formed organization, but it will be possible to complete the transaction in many instances.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation is authorized to take over only first mortgages.

But if the first and second mortgages combined, as well as taxes and other liens due do not exceed 80 per cent of the value of the property it may be possible for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to take over the indebtedness in exchange for its bonds.

In such a case the corporation would have to take over both the first and second mortgage so that it could have first mortgage on the property in its own name. To do this the home owner would have to get the consent of the holders of both the first and second mortgages to accept the bonds of the corporation in exchange for their claims.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation then would make a new arrangement which would lump the entire indebtedness under a plan by which the loan would be paid off in 15 years with interest at 5 per cent.

It must be emphasized, however, that the owners of both the first and second mortgages would have to agree to the plan.

That such an arrangement might be satisfactory to the corporation has been been made known in a statement by William F. Stevenson, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Additional features of the home owners' loan act will be discussed in this column tomorrow.

ARSON CHARGE HOLDS TRIO

Three men were held for court and a fourth was arrested last night in connection with an attempt to fire Mattie's Theater, Wilmerding, Tuesday.

Joseph Tonti, 32; Tony Cerese, 32, and John Rule, who was said to be the theater manager, were held for court on charges of arson, conspiracy to commit arson and possession of explosives at a hearing before Justice of the Peace John T. Small, of East McKeesport.

All were jailed in default of $10,000 bond each.

Robert Crystol, 36, of R. D. No. 2, Pitcairn, reputed owner of the theater, was arrested by Patrolman Richard Butler, of Wilmerding, and jailed on a district attorney's detainer. Crystol was said to have been implicated in the alleged arson plot by one of the three others.

The attempted burning was frustrated by Wilmerding police who reported arresting Tonti and Cerese as they left the theater. County Detective Peter Connors said he learned where 20 gallons of gasoline and an electrical extension line involved in the case had been procured.

PENSION LAW TO GET TEST

Whether the new pension law for county employes is constitutional and has made the fund solvent, is to be put up to the courts. The County Commissioners will seek a court order requiring Controller Robert G. Woodside to establish his right to deduct 3 per cent from salaries for pension purposes.

The Commissioners have refused to sign payrolls for their office after the deduction is made, but after they have signed the rolls at face, the Controller subtracts the 3 per cent.

The contemplated court action has been agreed on by the Controller and Commissioners as a test of the law.

William A. Frasher and Edward H. Simon, employe representatives on the Pension Board, met with the old board for the first time yesterday.

D. A. R. Historian Dies in Accident

EVANSTON, Wyo., July 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. Frank Phelps Toms, of Pasadena, reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution for the national society of Daughters of the American Revolution, died in a hospital yesterday of injuries received in an automobile accident 20 miles east of here.

Mrs. Toms and her husband were en route to Detroit to visit their son. Toms was not injured.

Lawyer Gets Georgia Congress Vacancy

ATHENS, Ga., July 6.—(AP.)—Paul Brown, Elberton lawyer, has been elected congressman from the Tenth Georgia District to serve out the unexpired term of the late Charles N. Brand.

Yesterday a vote of 12,205 compared to a total of 5,847 for his eight opponents on the face of nearly complete returns.

Police Find Still, Now They Hunt Christmas

SHARON, Pa., July 6.—Police are looking for Christmas, but it is John, not the holiday which made Santa Claus famous.

It's all because firemen found, when they answered a call to the Christmas home, a two-gallon still on the second floor. It was said that the missing John is in Ohio.

The flames were thought to have been started by sparks from a firecracker.

Verona Justice Named by Pinchot

HARRISBURG, July 6.—(INS.)—Clarence W. Bumgardner, Verona, Allegheny County, became justice of the peace of that borough today by appointment of Gov. Gifford Pinchot. He fills the vacancy caused by the death of Austin J. Houscholder.

'SMOKE' SELLER SENTENCED

James Wilson, 38, Negro, of 6 Shomin street, described by police as a peddler of "smoke," the favorite beverage of the Monongahela wharf habitues, was sentenced to 60 days in the workhouse by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in night court.

Wilson readily admitted selling the intoxicant—a mixture of water and denatured alcohol—at five cents a half-pint. Patrolman Frank Collins arrested Wilson at Fifth avenue and Fernando street and found a small quantity of denatured alcohol in his satchel.

After hearing testimony of the patrolman, Wilson said:

"Let's make a long story short. Send me to the workhouse."

Rothenberg obliged with 60 days.

BAR HEAD URGES MARRIAGE BAN FOR DIVORCED

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—Divorced persons should be forbidden to marry again, Clarence E. Martin, president of the American Bar Association, told the National Educational Association last night.

Divorce, he said, has reached a higher rate here than in "any civilized country."

"Divorce by agreement," as proposed recently before the Association for the Advancement of Science, already exists in the United States, the Martinsburg (W. Va.) man said. He continued:

"Nearly nine-tenths of the divorces granted in this country in 1930 were uncontested cases. We have divorce by agreement. While not so bold and open as in Russia or Mexico, it is just as effective."

WOULD TIGHTEN LAWS

He proposed sharp tightening of the marriage laws, saying:

"Banns should be published, migratory divorces prohibited, and Gretna Greens abolished. One-third of our divorcees now remarry. Remarriage should be limited to cases of annulments, on grounds existing at the time of marriage.

"Divorce shelters juvenile crime. Orphan asylums find the greater number of children dependent upon them are children of divorced parents."

SCULPTOR MAKES PLEA

Lorado Taft, noted sculptor, appealed to school teachers to do their part in righting a nation which he said "has little accumulated wisdom." He said:

"We Americans have little accumulated wisdom and slight appreciation of the gifts of the ages. Our life is casual, without background. Our homes seem to be on casters, like our furniture, ever changing, ever moving.

"Our music is jazz, our drama the movie, our literature the strident daily. To the other arts we are practically immune."

PAY FAILURES SCORED

The committee on resolutions of the education association last night made public its recommendations and vigorously protested against "the policy of cities . . . that have unnecessarily failed to pay their teachers."

The resolution regarding pay said that many cities in the matter of salary payment had "unfairly discriminated against teachers." In the same resolution was included a statement that Chicago teachers, long unpaid because of the upset finances of the city, "have shown such loyalty, devotion to duty and zeal."

Togas for Teachers Of 'Dead' Languages

CHICAGO, July 6.—(INS.)—A new life for the "dead" languages was contemplated today by teachers of Latin and Greek in attendance at the annual convention of the National Education Association here.

Introduction of a bit of jazz tempo in Latin teaching might whet the appetites of students for the unpalatable subject, the teachers agreed.

As a start, Miss Mildred Dean, head of the Latin department of the Washington (D. C.) schools, said, the teachers might don togas.

At a huge meeting last night attended by 5,000 delegates to discuss the nation's education program, Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, declared education and national defense are synonymous. He said:

"The two terms, reduced to their common definition, mean security, prosperity and peace."

He struck at spread of communistic propaganda and called on the teachers to fight its growth.

PINCHOT FIRES MRS. CORT

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 6.—County Poor Director Anna E. Cort, of Latrobe, has been fired from the Westmoreland County Emergency Relief Board, she announced today. Her "resignation" has been accepted by Gov. Pinchot, she revealed today in a letter received from the Governor, although she never resigned.

Mrs. Cort was asked to resign by other members of the relief board on June 9, following efforts to effect a secrecy pledge on May 16, when plans for a big state setup were discussed. At that time she was interviewed by newspapermen. Mrs. Cort says she will continue her duties as poor director.

Seek Gordon Link In Jersey Murder

ORANGE, N. J., July 6.—(INS.)—Search for the slayers of Jack Lipets, alias John Atkins, found fatally shot in a parked automobile in Livingston Tuesday, was renewed today by police.

Efforts were being made to learn whether Lipets was an associate of Waxey Gordon, reputed beer baron now under indictment for income tax evasion. Four witnesses against Gordon have been murdered.

Lipets' wife, Rose, denied he was connected with any New Jersey "racket."

Oil Gusher Struck Near Waynesburg

WAYNESBURG, Pa., July 6.—(INS.)—Southwestern Pennsylvania's first oil strike in several weeks was reported here today with a gusher coming in on the J. H. Hazlett farm in Amwell Township, Washington County.

The new well produced 225 barrels during its first 24 hours of operation.

Man Silent Year Speaks Twice; Divorced

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. Estella Ginger testified before Judge Joseph Sabath that her husband refused to speak to her for one year.

After that he spoke twice, she said. What he said was not revealed.

Judge Sabath granted a divorce on grounds of cruelty.

SWIFT LEAVES 5 MILLION

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—The estate of Edward F. Swift, who fell to his death from a window of his North Side home May 28, 1932, was valued at $5,000,000 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday.

The document showed money left in banks of Boston, New York and Chicago totaled $436,392 and listed other assets including 121,622 shares of Swift & Co. stock.

Swift was vice chairman of the board of the packing concern.

His will left $1,500,000 to charity; half the remainder of the estate to the widow, and the balance in a trust for his three children, T. Philip Swift, Edward F. Swift, Jr., and Mrs. Annie May Swift Henry, and the latter's husband.

SEEK TO 'CAN' STAR'S LIGHT

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—Scientists are figuring on "canning" some of the energy from the star Arcturus so they'll have some of it to help light a Century of Progress after September 21, when Arcturus drops from sight over the horizon.

This was revealed by George E. Simpson, of the staff of an electrical concern at the World's Fair.

Light impulses from the star, greatly magnified by a photo-electric cell arrangement, have been used as the motive power for turning on the lights at the fair, but inasmuch as the exposition will continue for about five weeks after September 21, the question of getting energy from Arcturus after that time arose.

An observatory at Elgin, Ill., has been assigned the job.

Ex-Wrestling Champ Pleads Bankruptcy

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—Stanislaus Zbyszko, former world champion wrestler, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday, listing his debts at $26,869 and his assets at $256.

He named Gladys Buszik, who obtained a judgment against him last May on a breach of promise charge, as a creditor to the extent of $18,243.

Lottie Coll, Pals Plead Not Guilty

NEW YORK, July 6.—(Universal)—Lottie Kreisberger Coll, gungirl widow of the slain gangster, Vincent Coll, was sent back to jail yesterday after pleading not guilty to charges of murder and robbery, together with her pals, Albert Guarino and Joseph Ventre.

The trio appeared in Bronx County Court, accused of killing 22-year-old Mollie Schwartz, an innocent bystander, in an attempted robbery in the Bronx June 21.

Shot Breaks Pipe In Smoker's Mouth

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—George Jbrenna, proprietor of a dance pavilion at Lily Lake, who is alleged to have fired a bullet which cut the stem of a pipe in the mouth of Frank Shudbl, of Mocanaqua, was held in $2,000 bail yesterday for court.

He was arraigned before Justice of the Peace John J. Gallagher, of Shickshinny, on charges of intent to kill and possession and discharge of firearms. The justice said the shooting occurred Tuesday night.

Democrats Form 16th Ward Club

Sixteenth Ward Democrats last night organized a campaign club, the group being patterned after similar clubs being formed throughout the county. Officers elected: J. Conley, president; A. C. Foley, vice president; F. B. Holmes, corresponding secretary; J. F. Britt, financial secretary; J. Milrath, treasurer.

City Chairman John J. Murray and Representative John J. Kane spoke to the new club members.

Navy Will Name Ship 'Valley Forge'

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—The name of one of Pennsylvania's far-famed historic spots—Valley Forge—is expected to be given to one of two new aircraft carriers to be built under the public works program.

Read Admiral Frank B. Upham, former chief of the Bureau of Navigation, yesterday recommended to Secretary Swanson, of the Navy Department, that the vessels be named Valley Forge and Yorktown.

Lindy Hoax Convict's Mother Dies of Grief

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—(INS.)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for Mrs. Agnes T. Whitaker, 67, widowed mother of Norman T. Whitaker, who was given a prison term with Gaston B. Means in the Lindbergh kidnaping hoax perpetrated on Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean.

Mrs. Whitaker died Tuesday. Grief over the troubles of her son is said to have been a contributing cause.

Two Churches Hold Kennywood Outing

St. Anthony's and St. Hyacinth's Polish Catholic churches and their parochial schools are picnicking today at Kennywood. Races, games and dancing were on the program. The Rev. Theodore Schultz and the Rev. M. Dulak were in charge.

Today is the final day when school picnic tickets purchased earlier this year are accepted.

MENU CONTEST WOULD FILL BIG BOOK

All the appetizing, practical dinner menus that have been submitted in the first three weeks of the Prudence Penny $100 weekly cash prize contest, whether or not they were winners, were placed in one book they would make a valuable guide for housewives. They cover hundreds of appetizing ways to serve meat, poultry and fish, offer a variation of side dishes required for a well-balanced dinner and out of the thousands of entries submitted there are no two alike.

With a book of this kind at hand, the housewife would never have to ponder about what to serve for a good dinner, changing the proportions of food to fit the size of the family if for less or for more than four persons. These dinner menus will probably not reach book form but many of the best of them, as well as the winners, will be published from time to time in the Sun-Telegraph.

Contest No. 4 is in full swing. It is on the same question: "Can four persons be served with a well-balanced, appetizing dinner menu at a cost of not to exceed $1.50?" and the Sun-Telegraph prize list for this week still offers a total of $100, with $25 as the first prize. The judges are still working on the entries in Contest No. 3.

Housewives may send in as many menus as they wish. In today's Sun-Telegraph, on another page, are an entry blank and the the rules. If additional entry blanks are desired they can be had for the asking at Triangle, Krogers, Butler's, McCann's, Clover Farm or Donahoe's stores.

Every housewife in the reading area of the Sun-Telegraph is invited to participate. Entries for this week's contest—No. 4—do not have to be submitted before midnight next Tuesday. It is advisable, however, to get them into the hands of Prudence Penny as early as possible.

THEATER URGED FOR PARK

May Beegle, Pittsburgh concert manager, wants the city to erect a $55,000 building on Flagstaff Hill, Schenley Park, in which to stage outdoor summer entertainments.

In a letter to Council, Miss Beegle suggested the city obtain the necessary funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The building would have a glass roof and open sides. It would cover a site measuring 90x160 feet, and would seat 2,000 people.

Old Paper Sought In Drive for Needy

An appeal for old paper, unwanted clothing and furniture was issued today by the Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries. Sorting and baling the paper will provide work for many needy people, it was pointed out. Donations can be collected by trucks on request, it was emphasized.

Watch them EAT!

CHILDREN love the snap, crackle and pop of Kellogg's Rice Krispies and they never tire of the delicious flavor.

Rice Krispies are so nourishing and easy to digest. Fine for the evening meal as well as breakfast. Always oven-fresh. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

New!

Satins

The sponsorship of Lanvin, Vionnet, Schiaparelli—in fact, all of Paris—is making satin a sweeping autumn mode. And women are already adopting satin hats, for they are designed to satisfy the perennial mid-summer urge for something very new in millinery, that will carry over into fall.

Satin, very, very shiny satin with a real Spanish look, in hats that are as light on the head as linens. Low-crowned sailors, medium-brim models, and the new berets that poke up in the back, jut out in front, and assume a cynical jauntiness . . . a "first" collection introduced by our Millinery Salons, at $3.75 to $7.50.

BERT LYTELL, GILDA GRAY -:- Willie, Eugene Howard in Vallee's All-Star Show -:- RADIO FEATURES TONIGHT

Ray Perkins Offers New Air Review

Out of the eighteenth century come Boswell, Dr. Johnson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sheridan and the famous actress, Mrs. Siddons, to relive via NBC-KDKA at 10:30 tonight in "The Silver Candlestick," prize British radio play.

The play, written by Rudolph de Cordova and Alicia Ramsey, co-authors of "Dr. Abernathy," deals with a semi-comic moment backstage before a first night performance of "Macbeth."

* * *

Perkins' New Show

Replacing the NBC-WCAE "Munchausen-isms," the Ray Perkins Revue zooms into the radio spotlight at 10 tonight with everything from Shakespeare to comedy impersonations.

For 45 sparkling minutes you'll hear: Bobby Perkins (Ray's kid sister) in her air debut; Hildegarde Halliday, diseuse; William S. Rainey, in Shakespearean monologue, and a special "Raising Junior" sketch, with music by the Rollickers, Roy Smeck, Jimmy Brierly, Mario Cozzi, Kathryn Newman, Peg La Centra and Louis Katzman's Orchestra.

* * *

Musical Premiere

"Presenting Mark Warnow," a new weekly, CBS musical show, has its premiere over WJAS at 9:15 p. m., with Gertrude Niesen and the Four Clubmen as vocalizing guests.

Warnow, also director of "Curtain Calls," Sunday dance features and alternate Columbia Revue broadcasts, ushers in the series with one of his own compositions, "Coming Down to Earth."

* * *

Rudy's All-Stars

Bert Lytell, Gilda Gray, Willie and Eugene Howard, Prof. Sylvester, comedy monologist, and the Hertz Brothers, accordion-saxophone outfit comprising Rudy Vallee's most recent find, head the crooning maestro's weekly WCAE bill at 8 tonight.

The dramatic bit, starring Lytell, is a scene from "Death Takes a Holiday."

Huntley Due Here

Jimmy Garrighan does his WWSW sign-off at 11, to be followed, beginning tomorrow night, by Lloyd Huntley and his "Isle o' Blues" orchestra.

"Liebestraum," done by a chorus of 16 voices and Don Voorhees' band, highlights "Show Boat"—WCAE at 9 . . .

Ruth Lyon and Edward Davies are billed for "Thursday Special" — KDKA at 4 . . . "Concert Footlights"—KDKA at 7:15 — features Mario Cozzi, baritone.

'Special'

Ruth Lyon, soprano, who with Edward Davies, baritone, shares "Thursday Special" solo honors over KDKA at 4 p. m. today.

Globe-Trotter Schedule

News flashes by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, are broadcast today at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. over WCAE-WJAS.

The 2:15 period is cancelled in deference to network broadcasts of the "Baseball Game of the Century."

Aircaster's Stooge Catches Up On Mail and Tells Fans What They Want to Know

By AGNES M'GILLICUDDY

(Pinch-Hitting for the Boss.)

Now that Aircaster has left the question of filling the column to me while he gads about, I think I'll surprise him by clearing off the desk of the letters that piled up over the holiday.

Quite a few of the customers with good memories have written in asking what has become of some of the favorites of yesterday—and before that, well, here's the answer:

Art Gillam, for instance, is selling hardware in Texas; Harry Brown, of the old Hank Simmons Showboat, is a reader in a Christian Science Church; Henry Burbig is doing occasional vaudeville.

Peter Biljou is running a New York curiosity shop; Moran and Mack are crashing Hollywood; Bob Sherwood is writing in Brooklyn; Lee Morse is in vaudeville; Lassie Joy is in charge of a studio.

George Frame Brown, of the famous rural sketches, is not doing anything; Wendall Hall is at KYW, Chicago; the Parnassus Trio has disbanded, Virginia Rea, I believe has retired; Jones and Hare are idle; Virginia Gardiner is devoting herself to the duties of a matron; Adele Vasa is a housewife, too.

Yolande Langworthy, of "Arabesque" fame, is writing movie scripts; Nicholina, who preceded Kate Smith on the cigar program, is operating a village restaurant; Frank Knight is dabbling with drama; Ludwig Laurier is attached to the WMCA, New York, music staff, and Louis Mason, the Clem Betts of "Moonshine and Honeysuckle," was recently signed up by WTAM, Cleveland.

RECOVERY AIMS OUTLINED BY ROOSEVELT

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 6 — A planned national economy, which for years has been the dream of many leading economists, now is clearly the aim of the Roosevelt administration.

The determination of the President to seek a complete "new deal" in industry, commerce and finance today was more apparent than at any previous time, following conferences held with his advisers on his return to Washington.

The plan is designed not merely to lift the United States out of its business depression, but to set it upon a path which it can follow without violent periods of prosperity followed by equally violent periods of depression.

TO USE POWERS

Control of industry, through the co-operative plan embraced in the Industrial Recovery Act; control of agriculture and management of the nation's currency all are embraced in the general plan.

In the carrying out of this plan the President expects to use the vast powers delegated to him by Congress with vigor whenever necessary. With the revival of confidence throughout the nation, many government observers believe that inflationary powers will be used sparingly if at all.

The planned economy program is distinctly an "America first" program. In the working out of the plan the President is expected to veer from the international theory which has gripped many leaders of his party for many years.

The President is represented as feeling the United States would be far better off with an equal balance of imports and exports, rather than to attempt to bring prosperity through capture of foreign trade.

In achieving this balance the President is expected to depend heavily upon creation of a stable foreign commerce with Russia and Latin American countries, avoiding as much as possible competition between them.

UNDECIDED ON PRICES

Efforts to bring about shorter hours of labor and higher wages through operation of the Industrial Recovery Act are expected to be redoubled by the administration. Increased employment and higher purchasing power are regarded as essential to a planned economy.

The President has made it plain that in the management of the nation's currency he does not expect the United States to enter into a period of undue inflation. He has informed callers he is ready to put on the brakes whenever the situation demands.

Nor has the President decided just what the new price level shall be. Many advisers have urged the 1926 level as fair, while others hold that it would be better to seek the lower 1924 or 1925 level for the present.

The administration's plan is held certain to mean a continuation of the high tariff policy. The rapid fall of the dollar is in itself expected to be a bar to heavy imports, which have been made in the last two years because of depreciated foreign currencies.

One hundred and fifty more men will return to work next Sunday at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad shops at DuBois. Increased production of coal in the district has created a need for more cars, officials said. A total of 40 trainmen will be assigned to this division to assist in handling increasing freight and passenger traffic.

M'CANN PRAISES TAX SUITS

The government is dependent upon the honesty of the taxpayer to derive $220,000,000 annually from income and other taxes needed for expenditures under the National Recovery Act, according to Attorney John A. McCann, special legal representative in Pittsburgh for the general counsel of the Internal Revenue Department.

McCann spoke before the Kiwanis Club of Wilkinsburg at its luncheon today. The Rotary Club of Wilkinsburg, was guest of the Kiwanians. Citing the Charles E. Mitchell acquittal, Attorney McCann said the government can still proceed against the banker. Prosecutions for income tax evasions have been successful, he said, pointing out that federal forces here obtained the first of the convictions that led to the downfall of Al Capone.

BREAD DEALERS GET WARNING

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—Prosecution of persons profiteering in bread will be inaugurated by the Department of Justice as soon as conclusive evidence of the action is obtained.

Secretary Wallace referred to Attorney General Cummings for "such action as may be necessary" complaints of unjustified price hikes.

He warned anew that there still are anti-trust laws and that the wheat processing tax which will go into effect at midnight Saturday should not increase the cost of a one-pound loaf of bread more than 1.3 cents.

Kajanus, Finnish Music Leader, Dies

HELSINGFORS, Finland, July 6.—(AP.)—Prof. Robert Kajanus known as the grand old man of Finland's musical life, died today. He was a distinguished conductor.

Davison Increases Pay, Coke Plant at Capacity

Summer Lull Here Unlikely as Orders Show Increase

The Davison Coke and Iron Company today announced a wage increase of 11 per cent for employes of its Neville Island plant, effective at once.

The coke plant on the island is running at capacity, with the blast furnace at about 86 per cent, J. F. Woessner, treasurer and controller of the firm, announced.

The pay raises are due to increased business with good future prospects, Woessner declared.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN

Meanwhile, with firms in this district anticipating no summer lull in business, an analysis of June car loadings for the Central region of the Pennsylvania Railroad showed a 30 per cent increase over June of 1932.

The loadings soared until they were within 10 per cent of traffic handled in June, 1931, and equaled business handled in the fall peak of 1931. Last month's loadings ran 11 per cent above those for May.

Coal was up 22½ per cent from June, 1932. For the first six months of this year, coal ran 60 per cent beyond last year's first six.

Ore loaded at lake ports and moved to inland furnaces for the same six-month period was nearly 100 per cent above the first half of 1932. Steel loadings were 45 per cent of 1930's figures.

PAYROLL INCREASE

With its payroll up 30 per cent since the middle of June the Oliver Iron and Steel Company today announced its production capacity has moved up to 45 per cent at its South Side bolt and nut works. Immediate prospects are "very bright," an official of the company said, explaining that many new orders have been filed within the past few days.

Employment at the Selden Company, manufacturers of industrial chemicals, has increased 50 per cent within the past two months, an announcement said.

Between 500 and 800 persons will be added to the payroll of the Hookless Fastener Company at Meadville, with the completion of a proposed $200,000 building program, it was announced by Herbert R. Walrath, vice president. The construction work should be finished by the first of the year.

Indications of an increased demand for coal and box cars were seen today in the return of 55 car repairmen of the Pennsylvania Railroad at New Castle.

INDUSTRY CODE SPEED SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—The administration is contemplating steps to hurry industries which officials say have been disappointingly slow in shaping trade agreements under the National Recovery law.

The situation was up for analysis and decision at a session today between President Roosevelt, Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, and Secretary Roper, chairman of the cabinet advisory committee on industry.

At the rate industries are moving, officials regard it as like wage increases cannot become effective on a big scale before the end of summer.

It was definitely understood Johnson and Roper had information to lay before the President showing that while many industries are debating what to do, individual factories have acted to take advantage of the expected advance in prices, by running full tilt at present low wage levels, piling up cheap stocks to make big profits later.

Bolivian Offensive In Gran Chaco Fails

ASUNCION, Paraguay, July 6.—(AP.)—A communique of the Minister of War was given out today saying that a Bolivian offensive against Fort Nanawa in the Gran Chaco border has failed.

The statement said the enemy had retired completely and would possibly attempt a new offensive.

DOUBLE BUDGET IN OPERATION

WASHINGTON, July 6. (AP.)—The Treasury today issued its first daily financial statement under the administration's new bookkeeping methods initiated through a "double-budget system."

Already the subject of political controversy, the "double-budget system" appears destined to be an issue in the 1934 Congressional and the 1936 Presidential campaigns.

The financial statement for July 1, beginning of the first complete fiscal year under the Roosevelt administration, segregated the "ordinary general expenditures" for government operation from the "emergency" or "extraordinary" expenditures under various relief acts passed by the last Congress.

Widow Sues City Over Man's Death

Mrs. Mary Carroll, whose husband, James Carroll, stepped into a hole while walking in the 1300 block in Forbes street, October 12 last, fell and fractured his skull, resulting in his death, has sued the City of Pittsburgh for $25,000 damages. The city is blamed with negligence. Harry A. Estep is her counsel.

50,000 STRIKE IN PROTEST ON SWEATSHOPS

NEW YORK, July 6.—(INS.)—Nearly 50,000 workers in the men's clothing industry in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Jersey were scheduled to stop work today in an effort to bring about wage increases and elimination of alleged "sweatshop" evils in the industry.

According to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, some 11,000 workers in Philadelphia will stop labor, 7,000 will go out in Baltimore, 30,000 in New York and the remainder in New Jersey.

Plants agreeing to step up wages from 10 to 30 per cent, Sidney Hillman, president of the workers' association said, will get their workmen back in a few days, but employers who refuse the wage increase will be made the objective of the walkout.

READING, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—Deadlocked by charges of bad faith on both sides, the Reading hosiery strike enters its twentieth day with the ranks of the strikers greatly increased and the next move clouded by uncertainty.

A six-point agreement as a basis for settlement of the strike was negotiated last Monday by Dr. Benjamin Squires, personal representative of Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

Yesterday, however, manufacturers questioned the authenticity of workers' signatures to forms authorizing the union to represent them in settlement negotiations and the strike once more was at an impasse.

LANSDALE, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—Two employes of the Interstate Hosiery Mills, one of three Lansdale plants closed by a walkout of workers, were injured last night in a disturbance in which a score of men participated on the platform of the Colmar Railroad station.

PINCHOT'S WIFE ON PICKET LINE

LANSDALE, Pa., July 16.—(INS.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, was given a tremendous ovation today when she joined striking hosiery mill workers on picket duty here and pledged her support to their cause.

Speeding into town in her automobile, Mrs. Pinchot went first to the Dexdale hosiery mills, one of thre three factories where 1,500 workers are striking for union recognition. Amid cheers from the strikers, she marched with them a few minutes and then went to Memorial Park to address a rally.

Later she departed for Doylestown, where the legislative sweatshop investigating committee, of which she is a member, is holding a hearing.

SWEATSHOP QUIZ IN DOYLESTOWN

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—Moving toward the close of its public hearings in this area, the state committee investigating sweatshop conditions in Pennsylvania industries hears Doylestown workers today.

The workers are to be allowed a two-hour period to tell their story and then employers are to be heard.

The committee holds its next hearing at Norristown tomorrow, after which Western Pennsylvania workers are to be heard at Pittsburgh on July 11 and 12.

The hearing originally scheduled for July 11 at Johnstown has been cancelled.

Recovery Chart Shows Steady Progress

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—The "production" line on the Commerce Department's domestic recovery charts mounted steadily over adverse seasonal influences at the start of the present month.

The employment and payroll lines tilted less sharply.

Pushing the first of these indicators upward were increases in the turning out of steel ingots, automobiles, electric power, lumber and a number of other industries.

For both May and June, the department's statisticians said, production was "considerably higher" than in 1932 and in June reached the highest level since the middle of 1931.

COTTON TRADE'S CODE READY

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—The cotton textile industry's code of fair competition, first to be submitted to the national recovery administration, today was ready for President Roosevelt's scrutiny.

The agreement was expected to be placed before the chief executive with recommendations from Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator, later in the day when Johnson and Secretary Roper report on progress.

The administrator recently said Mr. Roosevelt probably would take several days to review the textile code and decide on its promulgation, in view of its importance as the first to be submitted, setting a precedent for other industries.

The textile agreement provides for a 40-hour work week, minimum wages of $12 in the South and $13 in northern mills. It also outlaws child labor.

'Victim' of Blaze 'Phones He's Alive

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—(AP.)—A telephone call from Atlantic City by Benjamin Coppolo, 25, graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, who was believed to have perished in an apartment fire in Philadelphia, today had rectified a grim error of identification.

Coppolo, whose home is in Weedville, Elk County, learned at the shore city that residents of the apartment building in West Philadelphia had identified him as the victim of a blaze in his rooms.

COAL LEADERS SCAN CODE AT MEET

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—After a holiday lapse, bituminous coal operators today renewed discussions of how their industry can be fitted into President Roosevelt's industrial recovery program.

A group of northern producers met to talk over a code prepared by Central Coals Associates, Inc., a new organization formed under the direction of Frank E. Taplin, of Cleveland, O.

While Central Coals officials refuse to make public the code, it is learned authoritatively it calls for a minimum wage scale of 45 cents an hour for miners, with a 36-hour week. It is also understood that the northern operators are willing to allow a provision for somewhat lower wages in the southern fields.

FIGHT 'SPREAD'

Central Coal Associates announced several weeks ago, however, it was ready to fight for less spread between northern and southern wages than now exists. Officials claim that southern wages amount to about 18 cents an hour as compared with 40 cents or more in the north.

Coal operators from Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Northern West Virginia and Maryland attended previous Central Coals meetings.

Producers from Illinois and other western fields will assemble tomorrow to discuss a code with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. Lewis and Illinois operators of union mines issued the call last Saturday in Chicago.

JOHNSON SEES HOPE

Several southern operators also are in the capital talking over their views of a code, but they have not publicly expressed their thoughts during the last few weeks.

Hugh S. Johnson, industrial recovery administrator, said this week he hopes the industry will get together to form one code. He reminds the operators that any code adopted by a majority can be made binding on the entire industry.

Akron Survivor Resigns Navy Post

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 6.—(AP.)—Richard E. Deal, one of three survivors of the dirigible Akron disaster, today told friends he had resigned from the naval service and would go to New York to look for work. He said his resignation took effect last Monday.

BUSINESS TOLD TO WATCH ITS STEP

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP.)—A government spokesman bluntly warned American business today that if it fumbles the opportunity for self-government under the National Recovery Act "the advance of political control over private industry is inevitable."

In uncompromising words Donald R. Richberg, long-time representative of railroad labor, now general counsel of the recovery administration, said that should the industrial control plan fail it would not be a failure of government, but of the present industrial system, either proving the system fundamentally unsound or indicting its present managers of incapacity to operate it successfully.

His warning message was contained in a speech to the Merchants' Association of New York in which was expounded anew the policy of the recovery administration and in which business and labor both were exhorted to come forward quickly.

If the program is not rolling forward within the next 60 days because of holding back by either group, he said, "they will be indicted for incompetence by the suffering millions who are now giving to industrial leadership one more chance—perhaps the last—to justify its authority." He added:

"There is no choice presented to American business between intelligently planned and controlled industrial operations and a return to the gold plated anarchy that masqueraded as rugged individualism.'

"There is only the choice presented between private and public election of the directors of industry. If the privately elected boards of directors and the privately chosen managers of industry undertake their task and fulfill their responsibility, they will end all talk of dictatorship and governmental control of business.

"But if they hold back and waste these precious hours, if they take counsel with prejudice and doubt, if they fumble their great opportunity, they may suddenly find that it has gone forever."

STEAM RAILWAY JOBS INCREASE

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP.)—Class one steam railways reported an increase in employment to the Interstate Commerce Commission during April for the first time since last October.

Statistics released today by the commission show that 925,485 men were employed on class one steam roads during April as compared with 919,881 in March. However, the compensation of the men showed a decrease, payments during April amounting to $107,403,704 as compared with $110,607,067.

Police Photos Found On Mystery Girl

DETROIT, July 6.—(INS.)—Police today were checking the conflicting stories of a pretty 19-year-old girl found wandering on Belle Isle last night with an overcoat and a suitcase, and photographs of half a dozen Detroit policemen in her pocket.

At first she told police she was Marion Buckley, wealthy girl who disappeared in Cleveland recently. Later she said she was Sally Peceny, alias Marion Baker, of Bellaire, O.

HOLLYWOOD -:- Stars of Motion Pictures And Their Activities -:- PHOTOPLAYS

President on Screen in News

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 6.—Some would argue that "Design for Living" can't be successfully made into a motion picture, but Paramount has strong confidence in it.

The surest proof is the hot rumor that Gary Cooper will step into the cast to replace Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who will not be strong enough to act for some weeks yet.

In case this happens, Frederic March may switch into the Noel Coward role, with Miriam Hopkins playing the feminine member of the unusual triangle and Cooper acting Alfred Lunt's stage part.

Mr. March

Herr Lubitsch, who'll direct, is consuming endless cigars in polishing up the screen version and expects to get under way in the not too distant future.

At least one of the young players re-christened by Cecil B. DeMille is due to be heard from.

Judith Allen, the former Mari Colman, will go into the lead of "Too Much Harmony," the first out-and-out musical film on the Paramount program. Miss Allen plays here opposite Bing Crosby, whose fan mail has been jumping every day since the release of "College Humor."

Paramount will swing an imposing cast into the new musical. Besides Crosby and Miss Allen, there will be Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Harry Green, Lilyan Tashman and Kitty Kelly.

Miss Allen

Showing the extent of the new craze for tune-films, this studio alone plans 10 of them for the coming year.

Odd, what the years bring. In Hollywood the other evening, Leroy Prinz, now dance director for Paramount but formerly in the American air service, entertained at dinner for Maj. Ernst Udet, German war-time ace, whose squadron shot him down in a fierce dog-fight at dawn.

Director William Wellman, several times unhappily married, is keeping steady company again. Her name is Dorothy Coonan, and she's an Irish actress recently put under contract by Warners. Before that she used to lead the Busby Berkeley chorus lines. Bill had Miss Coonan dancing at the Miramor Hotel. Incidentally, she is a brunette. Usually, with Bill, they are blondes.

Miss Dressler

Quite a flutter among the diners when Marie Dressler showed up at this dance spot in company with the Allan Walkers. It's the first time I ever saw Marie invade the haunts of the stay-out-lates.

In honor of their friend, Gary Cooper, Dixie Lee and Bing have named their new son, Gary Evans Crosby . . . After all that talk, Ann Harding finally signed again for a long term contract at RKO . . . Nearly all of Hollywood went to the first day of the national air races. But the only stars who flew there and walked from their plane to their box were Virginia Valli and Charles Farrell and Mary Brian and Guinn Williams.

It's a good thing that Walter Abel didn't have to come here from Europe. The actor arrived from Broadway the other day with 10 pieces of hand-luggage, two trunks, a portable refrigerator, a wife, a baby, a maid and a harp. It took three Paramount studio automobiles to transport the menage to a hotel.

F. R. Vacation Ends; Seen In News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

His vacation ended, President Roosevelt is seen in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News boarding the cruiser Indianapolis at Campobello Island, New Brunswick, on his way back to Washington. Other pictures show the President's arrival at the island, where he is given a cordial welcome by the townsfolk. He is also seen and heard with Norman Davis.

Primo Carnera, the new heavyweight champion, describes how he beat Jack Sharkey for the title. There are also some startling poses by Carnera showing his immense bulk.

Thousands of troops and 1,500,000 citizens take part in the biggest demonstration ever held, before Stalin in Moscow. The military display included 350 airplanes in the sky at one time.

Women dry leaders are seen and heard as they attend the W. C. T. U. convention in Milwaukee (of all places). Mrs. Dora Whitney declares that the drys expect to win 20 states in the repeal vote.

Gen. Balbo, in command of the Italian air armada of 25 seaplanes, is shown starting from Orbetello, Italy, for the Chicago World's Fair.

The season's first swimming title meet for women is held at Jones Beach, N. Y. Dorothea Dickinson captures the 100-meter free style and Janice Lifson retains her diving championship.

In a suburb of Rome, Italy, the return of summer is celebrated.

Paris revives the knighthood sport of jousting. There are plenty of thrills and spills.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Jean Harlow is so naughty she is sent to reform school in "Hold Your Man," photoplay that will be seen in the Penn Friday.

Suitor Must Keep Block From Girl

NEW YORK, July 6.—(INS.)—Magistrate William O'Dwyer today established a new "zone" in Brooklyn.

He paroled Thomas Hay, 37, with the warning that if he "comes within one block" of the home of Lillian Allum she may have him arrested and he will be held in $5,000 bail.

Miss Allum charged Hay had persistently annoyed her.

Plays and Players :: By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Honeymoon," comedy production that is the second offering of the Stage Guild at the Willows, will be given its second and final performance there at 8:45 o'clock tonight, with Elizabeth Drake Alexander Kann, Madeline Skelly Foust, Robert Wilson and Marjorie Macqueen in the several roles. Miss Macqueen is a daughter of Madge Blount Macqueen, director of "Honeymoon." The Stage Guild reports that the public support of its summer drama project is most satisfactory, with various clubs and associations arranging for "benefits" and attendance in groups.

Chester Wallace, directing S. N. Behrman's "The Second Man," which will be given by the Summer Playhouse in Shady Side Academy Theater, Fox Chapel, next week, is rehearsing Polly Rowles, Robert Gill, Dorothy Devlin and Henry Patterson. When this play was originally presented a few years ago it featured Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Margalo Gillmore and Earle Larrimore.

Katharine Cornell, who ended her season in "Alien Corn" in Chicago last Saturday, expects to sail from New York July 22 to spend a vacation in the Bavarian Alps. Her tentative plans for next season are for an appearance for the first time in the role of Juliet and a tour of the country in repertoire of three plays, "Romeo and Juliet," "Candida" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." She has chosen her home city, Buffalo, as the one in which to make her debut as Juliet, late in November. Eva Le Gallienne also plans to include "Romeo and Juliet" in her repertoire on the road next season. Miss Cornell will arrange her itinerary so that engagements will not conflict.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Human Interest

THE CITY editor swore softly and hung up the phone. He swung around in his chair.

"Williams. Dutton. Miss James," he called.

The three reporters arose from their desks and grouped themselves around him.

"Bad news, folks," said the city editor. "The boss just called. Said the paper is too dry these days. He wants more human interest stuff. You three are my best reporters. No matter what your assignments are in the future, dig up some human interest stories on the side."

* * *

Williams was the studious type of newspaperman. As he himself could tell you, he was going to amount to something all right. There wasn't a doubt in his mind that he was going to write the great American novel some day, with a Pulitzer Prize play tossed in for good measure.

The man did have plenty of worries. He was the sole support of his mother, and the girl he had married four years before had been in Saranac almost four months now. His salary was inadequate; pitifully so for all his needs. With a very sick wife and a complaining mother, the strain was great. Yet Williams always managed to smile and hope for the future.

"You see, mom," he had told his mother that very morning, "I'm almost ready to start on my big novel now. It's bound to be a success, and better times are coming for all of us."

And even as he was uttering those cheerful words, the cashier in the newspaper office was slipping a pink note into Williams' pay envelope:

"This is to notify you," the note read, "that while your work has been acceptable in every way, the Daily Gazette must dispense with your services immediately in order to meet current conditions."

* * *

Dutton was the oldest of the three reporters. For 25 years he had been working on daily papers in the city of New York. His father before him had been a newspaperman, and he had pleaded with the boy to turn to some other business.

But Dutton wouldn't have it that way.

His father had died, and the years had flown by. He had had chances to get out of the game; chances that might have brought him an important income. But somehow or other he had neglected them all.

He had a boy of his own now. He had dreamed that the boy would become a brilliant lawyer. And what had happened only two nights ago? The boy had told him that he was going to become a newspaperman.

Dutton had gone out that night and got blind drunk. He didn't know that his father had done the same thing twenty-five years before....

* * *

Miss James was a hard-boiled gal. About thirty years of age, she had been a feature writer on the paper for some time. Whatever she covered, she covered well.

Miss James wrote her articles from the woman's viewpoint. And how she ripped those poor men apart!

Around the office they sometimes kidded Miss James about her extreme statements.

"The naughty lady is angry at one man," they told her, "so that makes her peeved at the whole sex. You think all men are that bad, lady?"

Now Miss James was a homely woman. She was thin, and her skin was bad, and she was very, very cold. And it was only when they kidded her with questions such as that that she showed any real emotion.

"Not only do I think that all men are that bad," she flashed. "I think they're worse. And I don't feel that way because of one unfortunate love affair either. It's because I've studied life, and because I know that no woman ever gets a square deal. And how do you like that?"

They didn't like it. But they might have understood far more than they did if they could have listened to her at night in her little home in Greenwich Village where she lived alone. At night? Sometimes it was dawn and she was still crying aloud.

"Oh, God," she would pray over and over again, "please send me a man. Send me a man to love and care for and hold me. Oh, please, God. Please." . . .

* * *

Williams, Dutton and Miss James walked slowly back to the rear of the city room. Miss James sat down at her desk, while Williams and Dutton lingered for a moment.

"That's life for you," said Williams. "Here I was going to start my novel today, and now this thing turns up. The boss wants human interest stories! As if we could find them just because he says so!"

Dutton tapped Williams on the chest.

"You're right," he agreed, "and I don't know what the newspaper game is coming to. Imagine a city editor sending out three reporters to look for human interest stories! I suppose he thinks they grow on trees.

"When I was a kid in the game things were plenty different. Those were the real newspaper days. A story was a story then. And unless you were under a roving assignment, no city editor would be dumb enough to send you out for human interest stuff.

"The more I think of it, the sillier it seems. Dig up some human interest stories! What kind of nonsense is that?"

Miss James slipped a sheet of paper into her machine. She looked very angular and very homely. Those prayers in the dawn were far away right now.

"Well," she sniffed, "what can you expect of a man?"...

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Marasmus, a Disease of Childhood, Is Curable

Dr. Copeland

Most of the diseases of childhood are due to germs or bacteria. Today I want to tell you about an ailment not caused by a germ. I refer to the disease called "marasmus."

It is sometimes referred to as "infantile atrophy," or "wasting." For many years little was known about this affliction. Because of the rapid advancement made in the study of nutrition and infant feeding, I am glad to say that the disease is now curable.

Marasmus is a wasting disease of infants and children. In spite of abundant food, the sufferers from this ailment lose weight and have poor physical development. Some children are more susceptible to it than others. They are usually the ones who are the offspring of parents with weakened constitutions and sufferers from chronic disorders.

Of course marasmus can be the result of lack of food. It can be traced to improper food and feeding. Chronic or localized infections, such as diseased teeth, tonsils and adenoids, poor eating and sleeping habits; lack of fresh air and sunshine, are other factors that must not be overlooked. It is commonly found in children who are the victims of tuberculosis and other serious constitutional diseases.

The emaciated appearance of a child with marasmus is indeed pathetic. Due to the marked loss of weight the child's skin is wrinkled and hangs in folds. The legs resemble drumsticks and the hands look like birds' claws. The child puts you in mind of a little shriveled up old man picture I am trying to paint.

Since sufferers from marasmus require careful and prolonged care, I would advise that a child afflicted with this disease be taken to a hospital.

Let me assure the worried mother that the disease is not contagious and is not passed on from one child to another.

I urge upon you the importance of the diet. This should include adequate amounts of milk, fruits, green vegetables, eggs, meat, cereals and bread.

An adequate number of hours of sleep is imperative. A daily afternoon nap should be encouraged. Whenever possible, the child should be allowed to sleep outdoors and be protected from cool and inclement weather.

Marasmus, as I have mentioned, may be due to a chronic focal infection, such as diseased tonsils and adenoids. It is imperative that this focus of infection be removed if complete cure is to be hoped for. But it is not advisable to subject the child to an operation when he is in a run-down condition. This can wait till he is stronger.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Tea—and Lemon

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one is served iced tea that has a slice of lemon placed over the rim of the glass, is it proper to take the lemon between the fingers and squeeze the juice into the tea, or should the slice of lemon be dropped right into the glass? H.

It's usually a difficult procedure to squeeze the juice from a slice of lemon. I think that you'll find the most convenient way is to drop the slice of lemon into the beverage and use the iced tea spoon to squeeze the juice from the lemon.

Far better than serving the slice of lemon, especially draped over the edge of the glass, is the serving of a quarter of lemon placed on the plate underneath the glass. Then we can conveniently take the quarter of lemon in our fingers and squeeze as much of the juice into the glass as we wish.

Book as a Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a book to a new friend. It is probable that I shall not see her much any more, and I'd like to show her what her friendship has meant to me in this way. Should I write an inscription on the flyleaf, or is this considered "marring" the book?

Would the use of a card be better? S.

Either way of sending the book is proper, but writing an inscription in a book is, naturally, considered more intimate. Since this friend is a "new friend" of yours, I believe that you should use the less personal form, and write your message on your card. Or, instead of a card, you might like to write a letter, telling her of your appreciation of her friendship and of your good wishes for her happiness always.

Active Candidate for Mayor, Says McArdle

—By MARK SHIELDS—

Councilman P. J. McArdle is telling his friends he is at this time to be regarded as an active candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination.

Mr. Shields

He has made no formal announcement of his candidacy, and has set no date for that announcement. It is possible he will not make one, but the fact remains that he views himself as a candidate, and so tells all questioners.

Mr. McArdle has been consulted by members of the Citizens' Committee, some of whom are understood to look with favor upon his ambitions. However, there have been no commitments in his favor from this group, the disposition there still being to support William P. Witherow, so long as Judge Frank P. Patterson will not be a candidate.

* * *

Carrying Battle On Own Banners

The Councilman is carrying the battle on his own banners. There is no perceptible evidence that any substantial group of professional politicians or businessmen are pressing him to run, but he has a group of friends who believe he would be an admirable candidate and a commendable official.

For evidence of the McArdle strength they go back to the independent councilmanic campaign of 1931, when McArdle, along with Councilmen Charlie Anderson and Robert Garland cracked the administration slate, winning three of four places.

Those who oppose the McArdle candidacy point to the national delegate race of 1932, when the Councilman ran third, being defeated for one of the two places awarded. He entered that fight to sprag the wheel of Alderman Jacob Yeager, named by Gov. Pinchot at the instance of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

* * *

Speculation As to McGovern Attitude

What that incident would mean with relation to McGovern's attitude toward McArdle is a subject of discussion and speculation. It is relatively unimportant as a consideration when it is understood that McGovern intends to support Witherow if the Pittsburgh Coal director runs.

McGovern always has claimed that the movement he headed was responsible for the nomination of McArdle in 1931. McArdle was on the slate with the County Commissioner, and his campaign was operated from the Fourth avenue headquarters.

County Commissioner C. M. Barr, who was elected as an independent along with McGovern in the subsequent general election, always has held that McArdle contributed something to the primary campaign of McGovern, and did his best on McGovern's behalf.

* * *

Candidates' Strength Unknown Quantity

Actually, no one knows exactly what is the real strength of Mr. McArdle, and what vote-getting propensities he would develop in the campaign. In fact, that is true of nearly all the independent mayoralty candidates whose names have been mentioned, and it also is true of Mayor Herron.

The Mayor has a bedrock of votes, a solid foundation he will get under any conditions. It is the vote which marches professionally with the regular organization, and cannot be swerved from its moorings.

But no one this year knows precisely the amount of that vote, for no one accurately may say how much the organization has been wrenched by the tribulations which have beset it in the past year, beginning with the removal of Mayor Kline and continuing with the indictment of Senator James J. Coyne.

* * *

Herron to Sound Sentiment Today

Herron intends to sound out sentiment today. Late this afternoon he will meet with ward chairmen and leaders of various wards who bear no official title. Peculiarly, the meeting has been called by Republican City Chairman William J. Soost. It is to be held at the Hotel Henry, long noted as the campaign headquarters of "regular" candidates.

It is the kickoff of the Herron campaign. The Mayor and his advisors feel that they have been taking it on the chin for a sufficient time without trying a counter attack. Even though in the ward meetings they do not gain new strength, they will at least try to stop any recessions from their ranks due to recent happenings.

From some wards there will be many representatives. This represents an effort to get all factions in line. From some wards there will be as many as five factional leaders at this afternoon's meeting, an indication that all is not serene harmony and confidence.

U. S. COLLECTS SIX MILLION HERE IN JUNE

Income Taxes Total $3,800,000; Beer Brings $547,000

Internal revenue taxes collected in the Pittsburgh district during June totaled $6,000,000, an increase of $800,000 over March's collections, according to a statement today by David L. Lawrence, collector here.

This is the first statement issued by Lawrence since taking over the position.

Income taxes totaled $3,800,000 for the month, a gain of $200,000 over March. Taxes from the new legalized beer trade were $537,000. Since April 17, the government has collected $1,300,000 in beer revenue here.

Tax income from gasoline sales was $774,000, according to the statement.

PLAN NEW BANK IN WILKINSBURG

The campaign for stock subscriptions for Wilkinsburg's proposed new bank to replace the closed First National Bank of Wilkinsburg was launched today. The proposed bank will be known as the First National Bank at Wilkinsburg.

More than 1,000 depositors of the closed bank approved the plan for reorganization last night at a mass meeting in the borough high school. Thomas M. Allen presided.

As explained by George Roth Craig, secretary of the depositors' committee, the plan entails the sale of $250,000 worth of stock to be used as capital structure. Of this amount $200,000 will be capital stock and the remainder surplus and undivided profits.

The reorganization would render 50 per cent of the old bank's frozen deposits immediately available.

Trolley in Accident, Thief Takes Tokens

When G. Cacosli, operator of a Lincoln avenue street car, stepped out of the car to check on an accident involving the car and an automobile at Center and Herron avenues last night, a man stepped in and helped himself to $20 worth of street car tokens, police said.

The machine, driven by Miss Mary Matthews, of 1711 Mt. Joseph street, was damaged slightly, according to police report.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Now Europe is saying that they didn't get so sore at what Mr. Roosevelt said, as they did the way he said it. You see, diplomats have a thing they call diplomatic language. It's just lots of words, and when they are added up, they don't mean anything.

Will Rogers

Well, on account of the President having something to say, and wanting to say it, there is no diplomatic language for that. A diplomat has a hundred ways of saying nothing, but no way of saying something. Because he has never had anything to say, that's why they call 'em diplomats.

I have always said that a conference was held for one reason only, to give everybody a chance to get sore at everybody else. Sometimes it takes two or three conferences to scare up a war, but generally one will do it. I'll bet there was never a war between two nations that had never conferred first. Yours, WILL.

BALKS AT FINE BY ROTHENBERG

George Patanyi, proprietor of a restaurant at 109 Ross street, today chose to be tried in court on a liquor charge rather than pay a $50 fine on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

His place was raided last night and a gallon of moonshine confiscated. Lieut. Albert Jones testified before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court. Rothenberg imposed a $50 fine.

Patanyi said:

"That's too much. Hold me for court. I will be treated more leniently there when I am tried for violating the Snyder act."

Rothenberg complied. Patanyi denied selling liquor.

Cavanaugh Enters Race for Sheriff

Veterans of the 111th Infantry, according to their officers, have been given definite assurance by Thomas J. Cavanaugh that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff. He has been indorsed by this organization.

With Cavanaugh a candidate, at least three and probably four men will be fighting for the nomination. Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar intends to fight to retain his office, and Robert K. Cochrane, head of the Allegheny County American Legion, already has opened his campaign. Charles C. Campbell, of Castle Shannon, also is being urged by his friends to run.

VOTE PETITION CURB PUT IN EFFECT

Patterson's Brother Takes Out Papers For Council

Nominating petitions for John Patterson, brother of Judge Frank P. Patterson, as a candidate for City Council were obtained today at the Bureau of Elections. Judge Patterson's bailiff got the petitions in behalf of the brother, a resident of the Fourteenth Ward.

John M. Henry obtained blanks as Democratic candidate for Mayor, while Councilman P. J. McArdle and former Councilman James F. Malone secured theirs for the Republican nomination.

The first petitions were issued this morning. No more than 10 blanks will be given out in behalf of any one candidate, the County Commissioners ruled, to prevent a monopoly on the supply.

William T. Rees, director of the bureau, said it had been the practice of organization politicians to obtain large numbers of petitions in behalf of their candidates, causing a shortage before all candidates had been served.

Others who got mayoralty petitions were James J. Kavanaugh, 5177 Liberty avenue, and Charles M. Schenecker, 208 Los Angeles avenue. Petitions for other offices were obtained by the following:

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, John Collins, Leo A. Riordan, T. J. Cavanaugh, William S. Haddock and Charles C. Campbell for sheriff; Coroner W. J. McGregor and John A. Hork for coroner; Harry R. Zoller, John D. Nuskay, Joseph R. Lynch, J. S. Pastorius, George Demorest, A. D. Brandon and Ed Townsend for city council; Bernard S. Flynn, Crafton, and Dr. Richard White, McKeesport, for poor director; John Schrader, C. W. McKee, J. J. Moran, Thomas B. Carmichael, P. J. McDonough, William Nugent, Michael Walsh, Sam Adler and Louis Alpern for jury commissioner.

Three persons besides Alderman Sol Goldstein took out petitions for alderman in the Fourteenth Ward. They are James J. Laffey, William B. Stuffle and Thomas J. Jones.

POLICE TO GET TRAFFIC HONOR

Honors will be bestowed on city policemen tomorrow for their aid in winning the national traffic safety contest last year and bringing to Pittsburgh the "Safest City in America" title.

Members of the Better Traffic Committee will be at each police station to present facsimiles of the plaque awarded the city, which hangs in the lobby of the City-County Building.

The ceremonies will be held simultaneously at the 2:30 p. m. roll call, except that Director of Public Safety Harmar D. Denny, Jr., will present one of the miniatures to the traffic division at the 8 a. m. roll call. Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the education section of the traffic committee, is in charge of the ceremonies.

Protest Manchukuo Display at Fair

CHICAGO, July 6.—(INS.)—Rufus C. Dawes, president of A Century of Progress, was confronted with a neat problem of diplomacy today.

He was in receipt of a protest against inclusion of exhibits of the contested state of Manchukuo, in the Japanese exhibit at the Fair.

ROW AT CHURCH BRINGS ARREST FOR 21

Members in Duquesne Can't Agree on Who's Pastor

Differences among members of the congregation of the Slovak Evangelical Augsburg Lutheran Church of Duquesne over who is their pastor today had led to the arrest of 21 persons.

The Rev. John Murcek, supported by one faction, made informations against the opposing group, charging inciting to riot. Two of his followers, John Chila and Mary Kovac, also charged several of them with assault and aggravated assault and battery.

The informations were made before Justice of the Peace Bernard Volk, Versailles Township. The arrests were made by Constables William Brady and Leo Urbansky last night. Hearings will be held Friday night.

The group opposing Murcek were alleged to have prevented the minister and his flock from entering the church last Sunday.

Those arrested were George Hriznak, John Ursin, Susie Majerchic, Joseph Bobcek, John Bizza, Anna Karlovsky, John Pakan, Paul Machnik, John Bobcek, Mr. and Mrs. John Proksa, John Proksa, Jr., Joseph Proksa, John, Mary and Annie Domko, Mary Viovoda, Andrew Dvorsky, John Dvorsky, Anne Fabian and John Majercik.

VETS TO HEAR MUSMANNO

Judge M. A. Musmanno will be the principal speaker at the outdoor installation ceremonies of West Pittsburgh Post, American Legion, on the Schaeffer School grounds, Crafton Heights, Tuesday night.

A parade from the post headquarters in the Charmas Club will precede the program. R. E. McKibben will be installed as commander. Other officers are: First vice commander, A. Monroe; second vice commander, E. W. Sutton; adjutant, C. Richards; finance officer, J. J. Panebaker; sergeant-at-arms, S. C. Ryans, and chaplain, C. Kershaw.

State Legion Commander Paul Griffiths, County Commander Robert K. Cochrane, Jr., and State Senator Frank J. Harris are expected to participate.

Quarreled, One Stabbed

JOSEPH GIZZI, 19 CAROLINE BILINSKI, 19

YOUTH KNIFES SWEETHEART

Joseph Gizzi, 19, of Pitcairn, was held by county detectives today in connection with the stabbing of his sweetheart, Caroline Bilinski, 19, of Wall, in her home yesterday. The victim, slashed on the back, was in Braddock General Hospital.

Their romance was severed several weeks ago by the girl's parents, detectives said. Gizzi called at the Bilinski home and asked the return of a watch he had given her, paying for it on installments. When she demanded he first return her photograph, Gizzi opened his penknife and pursued the girl into another room, detectives say.

After slashing her several times, the detectives said, he fled, but was captured a short time later by Police Chief W. C. McDowell, of Pitcairn.

Gizzi told the detectives the girl's parents objected to him because he is an Italian.

Mother's $10,000 Estate Goes to Son

Magdalena Nusbaumer, Chalfont street, left an estate valued at $10,000 by her will just filed, naming her son, John Nusbaumer, beneficiary and executor.

COUNTY WON'T REGULATE PAY

J. V. Pessamato, machinists' union official, who complained to the County Commissioners that the county's 1,100 voting machines were being repaired under sweatshop conditions, will be notified that the county has no power to regulate the wages paid by contractors working for the county.

This message is to be conveyed to him by County Solicitor J. P. Fife, at the direction of the County Commissioners.

There was no comment at the Commissioners' meeting yesterday when Pessamato's letter was read. He charged that the Thomas Spacing Machine Company, holders of the contract, paid experienced machinists 35 and 40 cents an hour and that the men were compelled to work long hours.

George P. Thomas, president of the company, has denied the allegations.

Parents Divorced, School Made Boy's Custodian

CHICAGO, July 6.—(INS.)—The Morgan Park Military Academy was the legal custodian of a 9-year-old boy here today.

Judge Joseph Sabath settled a contest between the divorced parents of Harvey Levinson over his custody, by ordering that the boy be placed in the custody of the academy where he has been a student.

MINIMUM WAGE PLAN CERTAIN OF APPROVAL

Resolution Calling for 45 Cents Per Hour To Pass Monday

A resolution compelling contractors engaged on municipal work to pay their common laborers a minimum wage of 45 cents an hour will be made law by City Council next Monday.

The resolution, drawn by Assistant City Solicitor Thomas M. Benner on orders from Mayor John S. Herron, reads:

"Be it resolved, that hereafter all contracts let for any form of public construction shall contain a clause that the contractor shall pay common labor on said contracts not less than 45 cents per hour, and shall contain such other provisions as to the proof by the contractor that he is complying with said provisions and the enforcement of the same as may be deemed necessary in relation thereto."

Council yesterday afternoon expressed approval of the resolution.

STATE LAW CITED

Benner, in a letter to Council, cites an act of the Legislature, approved in 1931, which reads that "the specifications upon which contracts are entered into by the commonwealth for the construction, alteration or repair of any public work shall, as far as possible, contain the minimum wage or wages which may be paid by the contractor or his subcontractors for the work performed by laborers and mechanics employed on such work."

Benner, however, cites a case in which the city of Reading attempted to fix a minimum wage. The courts, according to Benner, held that Reading could not provide in its contracts that the contractor should pay a minimum wage. This was held to be a violation of the provisions of the statutes regulating the letting of city contracts and interfering with the provisions that all contracts shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder.

10 HOURS AT 20 CENTS PER

Benner says in his letter that he believes that the city is justified under existing conditions in changing its contracts and fixing a minimum wage.

Mayor Herron conferred yesterday with contractors now engaged on city construction work. The conference revealed that some contractors were paying as low as 20 cents per hour for common labor and many working their men 10 hours per day.

The contractors told the Mayor that they would immediately pay 30 cents per hour for common labor and cut the working day to eight hours.

American Golf Stars Refuse To Peg Scores

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Our golfers in England may break up another conference.

Prof. Hagen:

"I refuse to peg my game. I will allow it to seek its own level. I have not been in telephonic communication with the Amberjack. The line was busy."

Prof. Sarazen ran into some tariff bunkers while in conference with Junior Prof. Dunlap. Divots jumped 50 cents a bale.

We have the best of the monetary problem. Prof. Hagen is strictly a currency player.

The Prince of Wales followed Prof. Craig Wood around. He knew from the way Prof. Wood was playing he would scare up some foxes.

So we're doing all right outdoors, too.

Spanking by Husband Wins Wife Divorce

When a husband spanks his wife, it is ground for divorce, in the opinion of Judge Frank P. Patterson, who granted one to Thelma Duffy, 102 Eighteenth street, Sharpsburg.

Mrs. Duffy told the court her husband objected to her dancing with her uncle, John C. Duffy, a surveyor for the state of West Virginia, and the spanking followed. She said he held her across his knee in the presence of guests. Mrs. Duffy averred her husband drank, was abusive and on one occasion struck her between the shoulders. After they parted, she testified, her husband called her by telephone while she was in California, and his conversation indicated he had been drinking.

Theodore Roberts, who took his wife, Lillian Marie Roberts, of 517 Behring street, to his sister's home in his automobile, never returned and yesterday Mrs. Roberts received a divorce, granted by Judge Patterson. Roberts informed his wife he had another woman and did not want to live with her any longer, she testified.

Child Abused, Lencher Has Father Arrested

Anton Smerdel, East Ohio street, was arrested on a charge of abusing his 15-year-old daughter, and three others were ordered arrested today as Judge Benjamin Lencher continued his investigation of homes in which Juvenile Court wards have been placed.

Meanwhile, in the court room, a parade of wards, caretakers and parents passed by Lencher, as he sought to find out from the children and social investigators, the conditions under which the children are living. The stories of the children were alternately happy and tragic.

More than 100 were questioned yesterday, the first day of the parade. And juvenile drama passed from one phase to another as Lencher heard their stories.

Two other men were apprehended by County Detectives Michael Ford and Lawrence Kline for alleged abuses to wards. Clair Corbett, of Imperial, was ordered held under bond and a 17-year-old youth was also ordered held.

Four children were allocated, one to an aunt and three to a caretaker, after welfare workers of the Children's Service Bureau turned them over to the court for home-finding.

Due to insufficient funds, the service bureau representatives conferred with Judge Lencher last week, discussing plans to have the Juvenile Court take over 25 of their wards. While the conference ended without definite understanding, the workers moved toward turning them over yesterday.

Judge Lencher plans to hear and see all the wards and their caretakers during the next seven weeks—the first time such a plan has been employed. He issued instructions last night for caretakers to bring in all their wards at once to save themselves and the court inconvenience.

INDEPENDENT BENCH URGED BY LINDSAY

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for Common Pleas Court, in a statement today set forth his platform, its keynote being that the judiciary should be "courageous, independent, free of prejudice and motivated in the interest of the whole people."

Lindsay said he had not and would not make any trades, dickers or deals for support, and if elected would be free to perform his dutis in the interest of the entire public. His platform:

"In announcing my platform as a candidate for the Court of Common Pleas I do so fully realizing the importance of this office to the people of Allegheny County. Never has there been a time when there was a greater need for an independent and courageous judiciary.

"Government fails when our people lose confidence in their courts. This confidence can only be maintained when their judiciary is courageous, independent, free of prejudice and motivated in the interest of the whole people.

"Men should be elevated to the bench because of their individual and personal qualifications, not because of race, creed or color—not because of party affiliations—not because they are members of any clique, bloc or combine. Selection should be made on merit and merit alone.

"Upon these principles and ideals I have submitted myself as a candidate for the office of judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County.

"If elected I promise that during my tenure I shall not shirk or sidestep my responsibility in the trial of any case by reason of its political significance or otherwise."

BACK BROKEN, BUT MAN LIVES

Fate Intervenes to Save Victim of Runaway Team

A series of strange circumstances probably saved the life of John G. Bennett, recovering in the Pittsburgh Hospital from a broken vertebra and a pinched spinal cord.

Bennett was injured June 23 when an axle of the milk truck he was driving broke and threw the wagon on top of him. The horses dragged the upturned wagon several yards before they stopped, and Bennett's back was skinned. When he was taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital, a physician found the vertebra was broken and the spinal cord pinched between the pieces of shattered bone. Had Policemen George Jones and George Abbott not carried Bennett in the correct way, hospital authorities said, he would have died before he reached the hospital.

Dr. J. W. Stinson was at the hospital at the time and performed an immediate operation. Dr. Stinson said such an injury was usually fatal.

Because his back was skinned, physicians were unable to put a cast on Bennett, but despite this handicap the patient is recovering. Bennett was paralyzed by the accident, but due to the speedy operation his sense of feeling is slowly returning.

Judge Ralph H. Smith, of Common Pleas Court, has appointed Ralph H. Coleman co-receiver for the Mayflower Drug Stores, Inc., and has fixed Coleman's bond at $25,000. The concern was recently petitioned into receivership.

Pittsburgher Heads Sons of Columbus

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 6.—Members of the Sons of Columbus of America, ending their convention here, voted for Aliquippa as the 1934 convention city, and re-elected Donato Ardolino, of Pittsburgh, as national president.

PINCHOT SHUNS CAPITOL DESK

HARRISBURG, July 6.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has taken an indefinite leave from his executive duties at the Capitol.

At his office it was learned the Governor will not be here this week, and has set no date for his appearance at the Capitol next week.

He has one engagement next week, a meeting of the State Emergency Relief Board in Philadelphia Wednesday. He probably will come to Harrisburg Wednesday night.

Late this month he plans to fly to the annual conference of governors in California.

PARK MOVIES PERMIT ASKED

City Council is to act next week on a request by the Socialist party of Allegheny County for permission to show free movies in Schenley Park Sunday evenings during July and August.

The party informed Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang that the pictures would be shown through the courtesy of the Board of Education, the Y. M. C. A. and the United States Bureau of Mines. The party also asks permission to show movies in West Park Wednesday evenings during July and August.

Council to Accept Fifth Ave. Land Gift

An ordinance accepting a 20-foot strip of land on the north side of Fifth avenue from Boquet to Thackeray streets for the city is to be acted on by Council next week.

The property has been dedicated to the city by the Board of Education to be used in the widening of Fifth avenue.

Beer Distributors To Select Slate

The nominating committee of the Allegheny County Wholesale Beer Distributors will meet at 8 p. m. today in Moose Temple to arrange a slate, Harry Neaman announced today. The selections will be voted upon at the next meeting of the distributors.

COURT GOES ON SUMMER BASIS

Opening of the summer schedule in Criminal Court today was to see Judges William H. McNaugher and Ralph H. Smith sitting in two rooms to dispose of 50 indictments to which 30 defendants had signified intention to plead guilty.

The county grand jury has been excused until July 31, when it will pass on cases arising since the June term, so that defendants wishing to plead guilty and start their sentences need not await the September term.

BALLOT GUARDS TO GET PAY

Four special deputy sheriffs, who were appointed last November to guard ballot boxes in the Sheriff's office, and have been waiting for their pay since February 29, were notified today that it can be collected, through an agreement reached yesterday by Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar and the County Commissioners.

The Commissioners had refused to approve the bill run up by Gollmar, asserting the Sheriff should have gone before a salary board to get authority to employ the men and to set their compensation. Gollmar maintained that the men were appointed for an emergency and that he possessed the authority to hire them.

Yesterday Gollmar appeared in a salary board meeting. He said his opinion was unchanged, but that he was willing to meet with the Commissioners to let the men obtain their long delayed pay. The four deputies will receive a total of $2,425.

YES IT WILL pay you TO PUT JUMBOS ON YOUR CAR old OR new

● General Jumbos are the most economical tires you can buy because they cut car upkeep to a minimum. They float your car along on 12 to 15 lbs. of air—road shocks never even reach the wheels. Jumbos make even the lightest cars ride like the biggest limousine—and make any car look "A thousand dollars smarter." They are the safest tires ever built—not enough air to blow out—too much soft rubber to skid.

Ready for 153 Models

Jumbos are fast replacing "regular" balloon tires. Over 90% of all new cars can be delivered on Jumbos—and we have a change-over plan that makes it easy to have them on your present car. But first—see for yourself what a big difference Jumbos make—

Yes...owners "treat 'em rough"

...but find a Terraplane that can't take it...or a Terraplane owner who doesn't love his car as he loves his dog!

The way Terraplane owners drive, you might think they had a grudge against their cars.

But watch them smile while they float along at sustained speeds that would make most cars cry for mercy. Talk to them after they've done a stretch of high-gear mountaineering. Challenge them to say why they breeze so nonchalantly over rocky detours.

"Why, that's Terraplaning!" they'll say. "This car's no sissy—why nurse it? It's grown up. All you do is drive it—it takes care of itself."

And that's what makes Terraplaning a sport instead of just transportation. No—you don't have to hop along at 70 or 80, or take the side of a mountain at 55 or a rutty lane at 40. But you can if you want to—without repair-bill worry. "That's Terraplaning!"

"Don't I know it! We've done 748 miles in two days without a hill-shift. And both we and the car are as fresh as dewy daisies!"

"Lots of Terraplanes up here this summer—they're the only cars that can take these mountains in high gear."

WELFARE FUND TO ASK GIFT INCREASE

A special appeal for more and bigger gifts will be made to the "large giver" this year in the Welfare Fund campaign, according to William P. Snyder, president of the Shenango Furnace Company, chairman of the special gifts division of the campaign. Snyder said:

"It is necessary to say to this group that their support must be increased this year. Any conclusion that better business conditions have decreased the need for the service of social agencies is certainly disproved by a mounting burden of need."

Snyder pointed out that wage-earners, "who have responded far beyond the proportion of their means in every Welfare Fund appeal," are suffering the effects of the depression upon incomes which have never been far above their own needs.

BAIL REFUSED IN MAID'S DEATH

John Davis, 62-year-old chauffeur, must stay in jail to await grand jury action on charges that he killed Hilda Lindberg, 44-year-old maid, in dark Supreme alley, April 1.

Judge William H. McNaugher today refused to admit Davis to bail on the plea of Attorney Harry McIntosh that the District Attorney's office has only a note left by Hilda to back up the murder charge. The note read:

"If anything happens to me, I am going to meet J. D."

McIntosh asked that the District Attorney produce further evidence, but Judge McNaugher ruled against him when Assistant District Attorney Roy D. Clunk contended the commonwealth cannot be forced to reveal its evidence.

Hilda had been a maid in the home of an East End physician for whom Davis was office handy man until he was arrested. At the time of the murder near Peabody High School, Hilda was employed in the home of H. H. Laughlin, Woodlawn road.

COUNTY SPURNS BETTIS FIELD

The Curtiss-Wright Airport Corporation, operating Bettis Field, was notified today that the County Commissioners have rejected the company's offer to lease its field to the county as an auxiliary to the municipal airport, at an annual rental of $10,000. A. M. Marion, director of parks and aviation, was told to notify the company that the county cannot consider taking over Bettis Field.

M. Caldwell, vice president of the corporation, suggested that the county take a lease for two years for $20,000, and cancel taxes for the term. The official pointed out that last year the field made a profit of $38,000 and for the first five months of this year netted $13,407.

CONRAD NAGEL DENIES DIVORCE

GREENWICH, Conn., July 6.—(AP.)—Conrad Nagel, stage and screen actor, denied reports here that he and Mrs. Ruth Nagel were following the course of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford and were contemplating divorce. Nagel said:

"That's the trouble. Every time a couple is separated in this business, people start rumors that they are to get a divorce. But I'm sure that if there was going to be a divorce, Mrs. Nagel and I would know about it."

Nagel, who is playing at a Greenwich theater, said he would leave for Hollywood Sunday and would return to the East with his wife and daughter in August.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

Most of us aren't used yet to these abrupt changes both in weather and events. Just a few days ago we were all dashing from one event to the other in spite of the terrific heat. Now that it's cool enough to give everyone 10 times as much energy, the social world is practically eventless.

From now on there'll be gatherings galore at the country clubs and Saturday night dances at the clubs and the like. But debuts and almost all the big weddings and benefits are over until fall.

There is some entertaining of an informal sort in keeping with summer in honor of a bride of Monday—Lorraine Taylor, daughter of the Clyde C. Taylors, who'll wed George Smith Fichtel, the Frederick A. Fichtels' son.

Wedding Monday

They'll be married Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at Longue Vue Country Club by the Rev. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor of Shadyside Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Charles Lennox—she was Christine Johnson, daughter of the Hussey B. Johnsons before her marriage about a year ago—gave a buffet supper last night for the bride in the home of Mrs. Lennox's mother.

Dorothy Meyer will give a bridge-luncheon in her home today, and Mrs. William B. Rodgers, who'll be her sister's matron of honor and only attendant, will give the rehearsal dinner Saturday evening in the Pittsburgh Athletic Club.

McKelvy Wedding

The new president of the Junior League, Christine McKelvy, daughter of Mrs. William E. McKelvy, was married last evening. She became the bride of William D. Bickel, son of Mrs. William F. Bickel, of South Aiken avenue, last night, at 8:30 o'clock in the McKelvy home, in the Morewood Apartments.

Officiating was the Rev. Dr. James A. Kelso, of Western Theological Seminary. Martha McKelvy was her sister's only attendant, and George C. Kennedy was best man.

The bride appeared in her mother's wedding gown of ivory brocaded crepe, having a yoke and sleeves of rose point. Her veil was of tulle, cascading from a cap of rose point. She carried Joanna Hill roses, shading from pale yellow to cream as did her own, and white jasmine.

Of course only members of the two families were present at the wedding.

Debutante Dates Set

Although most of us are daydreaming about our favorite summer resort, a few young things are intent upon the Christmas holidays when they'll make their bows to the social set.

They are Peggy Griffiths, of Sewickley, daughter of the Paul J. Griffithses, and Marnie Hodge, daughter of the junior Edwin Hodges.

Peggy will be presented December 28 at a tea-dance and Marnie, December 23. And the race for Christmas dates is now on with debs and debs' mothers trying to decide which date in the Christmas holidays they'll choose.

To Make Debut

Another young girl has joined the largest debutante list in three or four seasons that for this fall. She is Dorothy Gordon Clark, daughter of the Donald G. Clarks, of Pembroke place.

Caryl Reynolds Weds Canadian Physician

Miss Jula Reynolds announces the marriage of her cousin, Miss Caryl M. Reynolds, of the Ruskin Apartments, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Grafton T. Reynolds, to Dr. A. J. McIntyre, of Elgin, Manitoba, Canada. The ceremony took place on Monday.

Mrs. McIntyre is a graduate of Allegheny College and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, and has been teaching in the South Hills High School for several years. Dr. McIntyre is a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. Dr. and Mrs. McIntyre will be at home after September 1 in Elgin.

Progressive Blind Club Committees Named

Miss Annabel A. Carter, new president of the Progressive Blind Women's Club, has selected her committees for next season. On the social committee are Jane Feny, Miss Mary Clair, and Mrs. D. T. Jonas, and on the program, Miss Mary C. Stone, Arlie Hewlett, Luella Thompson, Elizabeth Regester and Rose Bolen.

On the music committee will serve Mary Walrond, Constance Aldenhoven, Blanche Powers and Mrs. Vincent Donnelly. The legislative group includes Helen G. McCarthy, H. Lucile Walters; auditing, Mrs. James George, Elizabeth Goodman; and year book, Mrs. A. G. Bongartz, Mrs. Herbert Welty. Miss Ora Carter is parliamentarian and Mrs. E. W. Young and Miss Clara Yochim will attend to publicity.

City Club Invites 1,000 To Garden Party July 15

About 1,000 invitations have been sent out by the Woman's City Club for the garden party to be given Saturday afternoon, July 15, at "Vosemary," Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock's country home on Babcock boulevard. The affair, which is open to guests as well as club members, is a benefit for the club choral.

Bridge will be the chief entertainment feature. Mrs. James H. Hammond is serving as general chairman and assisting are many of the club members and a group of club daughters and their friends.

Election Marks Last Session Of Overseas Service League

Election is the chief business to be transacted at the national convention of the Women's Overseas Service League in the Hotel Schenley today. At 1:30 buses will take the delegates and visitors for a trip through the steel mills at Aliquippa and tonight the convention banquet will bring the five-day activities to a close.

The Rev. Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College, is the chief speaker and the Fireflies will sing.

John Watson, Col. H. L. Landers and Judge M. A. Musmanno are also scheduled to speak. A post-convention trip to Cook Forest has been arranged for tomorrow and Saturday.

At yesterday's business session the convention decided to continue its custom of holding annual conventions, voting down the motion to make the convention biennial. A membership-at-large motion was also voted against.

The tea given at the College Club by Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was a charmingly appointed affair, attended by the entire convention and many of the daughters. About 1,000 persons were present for the boat ride down the Ohio last night.

The day began with a French breakfast on the terrace at the Hotel Schenley, for which the menu was in French and the decorations were in the tricolors of France: red roses, ragged robins and baby's breath carrying them out.

Program to Be Given At College Club Supper

A musical program will be given in conjunction with the buffet supper at the College Club on Sunday evening. Mrs. Alice Stemple, who won the Art Society prize as well as the Mu Phi award last winter, will play a group of her own compositions and two other groups as well. Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell is also on the program and will sing, accompanied by Mrs. Beulah Taylor Marston.

G. W. Crawfords Give Dinner At Springs

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. Crawford, of Pittsburgh, gave a dinner at the Greenbrier this week in honor of the joint birthdays of Mrs. Crawford's mother, Mrs. Robert N. Warmack, and Frank K. Houston, of New York. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waters Taft, Col. and Mrs. Arthur W. Little, Mrs. Thomas T. Gaunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. House and Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Murtland, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. George T. Smith, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. L. Frederick Bruce, of Norfolk; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, Mrs. Florence Lenihan and Robert Baldwin.

Beginning Saturday and continuing through next week the Old White Art Gallery will exhibit a joint collection of the watercolors and oils of Glenn Shaw and Elsa Vich Shaw, of Cleveland, who have recently returned from Europe and the East Indies. Many of the canvases show fresh and charming impressions of their travels. Mr. Shaw painted the murals for the new Federal Reserve Bank of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Shaw did those which adorn the lobby of Severance Hall, Cleveland.

Arriving at the Greenbrier this week were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gary, W. A. Nicholson, Mrs. J. R. Price, John V. Douglass, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. McDonnell and Thomas V. Douglas, of Pittsburgh.

B. P. W. to Give Luncheon Tomorrow for Woman Editor From Oslo

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG.

The Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club is to have a distinguished guest at luncheon tomorrow. She is Mrs. Marion Alfsen, of Oslo, Norway, who has been for 10 years editor of the women's paper "Urd" in Oslo.

Mrs. Alfsen, who is en route to Chicago to attend the convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, is a charter member of the Olso Branch of the International Federation. The luncheon in her honor will be given at Kaufmann's at 12:30 o'clock.

On Saturday Mrs. Alfsen will leave for Chicago with the Pittsburgh delegation which includes the new president, Miss Marie Maloney, and Miss Anne Adams, Miss Lisa Blum, Miss Jennie Munro, Miss Katherine Wills and Miss Olive Kinsey.

Congress Choral Plans Affairs For Summer

Following the custom established some time ago, the Congress of Clubs Choral will keep up its social contacts during the summer by means of a series of informal entertainments. The first of these is a bridge luncheon, which is set for Wednesday at 12 o'clock. The second sopranos are in charge and the retiring chairman, Mrs. E. Boyd Birch, will be guest of honor.

On the committee are Mrs. Sara Kelley, who is serving as chairman; Mrs. J. C. Armor, Mrs. Bernard Dunbar, Miss Thelma Leonard, Mrs. D. T. Maxwell, Mrs. Arthur Yoerk, Mrs. McRae Williams and Mrs. M. W. Fitzpatrick.

Prize Winning Choral On Federation's Hour

Dramatic Producer Schemes To Break Up Romance

CHAPTER I.

"Auntie Madge!"

"Yes, Mary."

My husband's beautiful young niece came hesitatingly into the sitting room of our suite in the old hotel overlooking Gramercy park.

"Are you too busy to talk to me?" she asked.

"Never too busy for that, Mary," I said, smiling at her winsome, serious face, and laying aside the copy of my play, which I had been going over at Philip Veritzen's insistence.

Mary saw the manuscript and frowned.

"I'll bet you are busy," she said. "What does that old buzzard want now?"

I laughed up at her lovely, mutinous face.

"Is that nice," I queried laughingly, "to speak of your future father-in-law in those terms?"

Mary wrinkled her nose at me.

"If I called him the names I'd like to," she said rebelliously, "you'd lock me up on bread and water for a month, or else send me to a home for wayward girls. But, tell me. Is he bothering you, too?"

"Not much," I answered, although my spirit cried out against the falsehood. "He wants me to strengthen one role here at the expense of another, and it's a bit bothersome, that's all."

"If that isn't like him!" Mary ejaculated. "Tell you that you have the play of the year, have you work on the revision for weeks until every word suits him, then put it in rehearsal and approve it there, and then, out of a clear sky, change it all around like that! But that's the way he does things—out of a clear sky." Her voice trailed away despondently.

SUFFERS FROM INJURY

I patted the couch beside me invitingly.

"Suppose you sit down and tell me all about it."

She settled gingerly into place, looking at my foot propped up on cushions. I could not yet put it to the ground, although nearly two weeks had passed since that memorable night which had marked the rescue of Marion Morton and Carolyn Brixton from Charles Owen and the gangsters who had helped him in kidnaping them.

"How's the ankle coming along?" she asked solicitously.

"Dr. Gibson hasn't decided yet," I told her. "But he hopes it's only a twist."

"Let us hope he's sincere in hoping," Mary said flippantly. "It would mean more visits for him if it's a sprain. And there's a depression, you know."

"This is all beside the mark, Mary," I told her severely. "You came in here to tell me something important, and you're hedging. Come, as your Uncle Dicky says, get it out of your system."

Mary giggled, a sure sign of nervousness with her, then she sobered and her hands twisted together.

"Can you guess what that old hyena sprang on me this morning?" she asked tensely.

"By 'old hyena'," I said smiling, "I suppose you again mean Philip Veritzen, the greatest dramatic producer of his time, who is grooming you to be that most desirable of all things dramatic—a Veritzen star—and who is also Noel's father?"

"It's simply diabolical of him, the way he's arranged things," she burst out, "when he knows Noel is all tied up here with the production of his operetta and that club lecture stuff his father got him into. Don't you think it's the meanest thing you ever heard of?"

"Mary! Mary!" I expostulated, laughing: "I'm sure that what he has done is mean and diabolical and deserves every other adjective you want to give it. But I haven't the slightest idea of what particular action the man has been guilty."

RESENTS PLAN

"I'm just a congenial idiot, that's all," Mary sighed. "But here's what he's done. He told me this morning that he's planning to send me to Paris for a year's study, and that I must be ready to start in three weeks."

"Mary!" I said aghast. "Are you sure you didn't misunderstand him? He can't do that to you."

"No misunderstanding that bozo," Mary said, "and when you think that if Noel could only be over there, too, it would be the thing that I would rather do than anything else in the world! Well! it has been the dream of my life to go to Paris. Lately Noel and I"—as she blushed divinely—"have been dreaming about going together, some time.

"But this—you know, Auntie Madge, if I thought there wasn't anything behind the offer, I think Noel and I could make up our minds to stand it, because it really would be for my best good, you know."

"It certainly would be for the best good of your artistic career," I told her, "and I think Noel will be willing to sacrifice his own feelings in order to see you go."

"That's just it," she said. "I know he would. And that old father of his knows it, too, and is counting on it. Do you suppose, Auntie Madge, he cares a whoop in the hot place about giving me a chance?

"He just wants to separate me from Noel, that's all; and he isn't going to do it. I'll tell him that! I'm crazy to be a Veritzen star, of course, and to go to Paris would be heaven on earth; but the price is too high. I know that the old pole cat thinks if Noel's away from me long enough, he'll fall in love with someone else, or I will. Remember what he pulled when he had Noel away with him on that trip?"

I remembered only too well the serious attempt Philip Veritzen had made to entangle his son with Avis Arlen, the daughter of a former professional associate. The experience we had had with Avis Arlen and her widowed mother was too unpleasant and too recent to be easily effaced from my memory.

RECALLS AGREEMENT

Something else flashed before my mind—the malevolent look Philip Veritzen had given Mary upon the night we were all gathered in the mountain cabin to decide the fate of Charles Owen, after Marion and Carolyn had been rescued from him. It had been a revelation to me and an unpleasant one, for I had hoped that, following his agreement with me not to interfere with the happiness of his son and Mary, he would gradually become reconciled to the idea.

But this last proposal of which Mary had just told me, showed me that although he would keep to the letter of his agreement, he would try in every way possible to violate its spirit.

The letter of his agreement! The words brought something nebulous out of the depths of my consciousness, an idea which had first come to me when I had seen that venomous glance that Philip Veritzen directed toward Mary. I hesitated for a long second or two, for I dreaded immeasurably the thought of setting in motion something which I might regret. Then the sight of Mary's woeful face decided me.

"Dearest," I said hesitatingly, "do you remember last Christmas, when Mr. Veritzen promised that he would keep on with your training; when he made Noel independent by giving him his mother's patrimony, and when he left the question of the time of your marriage with me?"

Mary paled and flushed alternately, then she caught my hand.

"What do you mean? You said then we ought not to get married for several years. Have you—Oh, what is it? Tell me! Tell me!"

Whistler Got Little for 'Mother' Painting, Fay King Recalls

By FAY KING

Whistler's "Mother" is perhaps the best known and most popular modern painting. It is now being shown in America. The French government paid only $600 for it. The Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts once refused it for $1,000.

Whistler was an American, born at Lowell, Mass., but lived in England. His mother was Eliza McNeill, of South Carolina, and the second wife of Maj. George Washington Whistler. She was an intimate friend of his first wife, and it is said this sickly wife requested that he marry Miss McNeill, who adored him, if she should die.

No picture has been more often reproduced, and made a fortune for those who received royalties from this, but Whistler knew nothing of copyright and received none of this income.

Tell It to Elsie

By ELSIE ROBINSON

There Are Many Fine Friendships Among Women

Can girls be buddies?

Regular, honest-to-gosh, loyal and lasting friends—as men so often are?

Or are they different from men? Is there something about girls that prevents them from feeling real friendliness for each other? Are they bound to be suspicious of each other—selfish—always ready to hand each other the double-cross?

Wanda was convinced that Girls Were Like That; that they couldn't be true to each other. And, according to her, Boy Friends were the reason.

Maybe you believe that, too. Here's one little girl who doesn't—yet whose friendship has been tried plenty!

Dear Miss Robinson—

I've often thought of Wanda's letter, asking if real friendship is possible between women, even modern women. But I've found there are plenty of fine friendships between women, and I know of no better way of telling her—and others who may share her foolish opinion—than by telling her my own story.

My chum and I have been going together since we were 8 years old. We are now 22. We went through grammar school and were graduated from High together. We have shared each other's pains and fun—and now we have even shared each other's Boy Friend, and we still are friends.

In September she will be married to a fellow to whom I was engaged for a year, and I am to be the maid of honor. Joe and I went together for two years. He had known Mary before he knew me, but still he was considered my Boy Friend. Then came that happy day when I got my engagement ring. Mary was as happy as we were.

KEEPS FRIENDSHIP

Suddenly like the dawn of a new day, everything changed. Joe began to call on Mary and she, like the true friend she was, came to me and explained everything. And I knew that the two of them were not to blame if they cared for each other.

So I gave Joe up, even though I do still care for him. And they are to be married. I wish them all the luck in the world. They are both very dear to me, and why should our friendship be broken up—why should their lives be made unhappy—on account of my misfortune?

Just because I've had a little bad luck, I'm not going to drink poison or decide that all friendship is a bitter fake. Why should I? That would be both stupid and small, I think.

So I'm starting all over again, finding new and interesting things in life, and I know that in spite of this hurt some one, some day, will come along and make me happy. And if he doesn't I still have the friendship of two of the finest people on earth.

CAN FIND FRIENDS

So Wanda, take a tip from me. Snap out of your cynical ideas. They're just making you lonely and wretched. Find yourself some girl friend—don't expect them to be perfect, but don't expect them to be double-crossers either—and you'll find that life is sweeter by far because they are your friends.

Of course don't take up with just anybody. Use your head. But don't be suspicious of everybody. Don't take it for granted that all the other girls are just waiting to do you in. They're not. Accidents like mine happen, but what of it? Accidents can happen to anybody. That's no reason for deciding that the world's all gone to the bowwows, and that friendship is bunk.

LORRAINE.

That's one of the bravest letters that has ever come to this department, youngster. With such sense and spunk and sweetness, you needn't worry about your future. You've lost out with one man, but you'll find a hundred, just as fine, waiting for you, ready to appreciate you, eager to love and win you.

Here's my hand to you. You're great!

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Dicky Find True Happiness Again

Begin reading "Given in Marriage," a sequel to Heart of a Wife," by Adele Garrison. The first chapter appears at the top of this page today.

"Then we got desperate, for we both needed money terribly. When I proposed this kidnaping stunt to Sam, but in much milder form than I pulled it, he went straight up in the air and wouldn't hear to it at all, —— him! If he'd have helped, we'd have had the girl in Mexico by this time," Owen continued.

"Of course you know you're crazy, Owen," Dicky said lightly. "You couldn't have got away with it if you'd gone to the ends of the earth. But that's beside the mark. You say Brixton had nothing to do with the plot?

"No. He thought I'd laid off the scheme, until the girls went; then he came blundering up on the trail to a place we'd looked over. But I had a hunch he was coming, and I had him put out of commission. The rest—you know, don't you?"

"Got it, Mary?" Harry Underwood asked, and I realized that Mary's flying fingers had been writing down the halting words that came slowly from Owen's lips.

"Every word."

Cautiously, they freed Owen's right hand, waited until he signed the paper Mary had written, then bound him again. Harry Underwood put the paper in his pocket, and called Brown and "Hen-ner-y" from the next room.

"Take him out there and keep him until we come," Harry directed.

BRIXTON WEEPS

"May I be permitted to know what my sentence is?" Owen asked.

"Not now," Dicky returned. "We'll keep faith with you, and not turn you over to Kenellos. We promise nothing else."

The door had scarcely closed upon him when Samuel Brixton said hoarsely:

"What about me? Must my wife and Carolyn know? Ronald, of course."

To our horror he broke down into that most rending of all sounds, the choking sobs of a strong man unaccustomed to weeping. I saw Marion spring up and put her hands on Ronald's shoulder.

"Go to him," she said. "You must! He atoned for everything when he went after us and nearly got killed."

"It's all right, dad," Ron said simply, and Lee Chow mercifully drew the curtain across the alcove, shutting the two figures inside.

"So far, so good," Dicky said. "But now, what's to be done with Owen?"

"Will you turn him over to me?" Hugh asked quietly. "I am going away again shortly to the ends of the earth. I had thought never to leave this country again, but—things have come up—making it necessary. And—I will take Owen with me as I took Jack Leslie; only he will not escape me, as Jack Leslie did. I shall take care of that."

"One thing you must remember," Lee Chow said. "I go with you, but I cannot leave until after Miss Marion's birthday and the opening of the lock box."

"I will stay until then," Hugh said.

ANGER LEAVES

He went into the other room, and I felt Dicky's angry, puzzled eyes upon me. I think Lillian saw them, too, for she rose abruptly.

"Come on, people; let's get back to the hotel. Madge, I'll be waiting for you over there, if Dicky decides to bring you over."

From the alcove Sam Brixton came slowly, leaning upon Ronald.

"Will you forgive me, Lillian?" he asked humbly.

"It's all right, Sam," she said, and then by some magic she had herded them all out of the room and Dicky and I were left alone.

"Look here," he said roughly. "What's this big renunciation scene that Hugh is staging; this Sydney Carton stuff; this 'far, far better thing than I have ever done?' Blast his impudence! Is he going away because he fears that, if he stays, you'll grow to care too much for him, and he'll have the breaking up of a happy home upon his conscience?"

For a second I was furiously angry with him. Then I saw that beneath that apparent boorish anger was a tortured fear, and everything that was maternal in me yearned toward my Peter Pan. I think in that moment a knowledge came to me that almost all wives share—the knowledge that "mothering" a despondent man is one of the sweetest experiences a woman can have.

"Come here," I said, opening my arms to him, "and let me tell you the only thing that matters. Let Hugh and everybody else in the world go where they please. Just listen to this! I love you. Do you love me?"

And in his answer I forgot physical pain and mental problems. For the moment, only Dicky and I occupied the world.

Household Hints

Monthly or bi-monthly cleaning saves the often dreaded old-fashioned housecleaning weeks.

To encourage convalescing children to eat color the gelatin desserts in different colors and place in molds. Then they will appeal more to youngsters.

To use the cheaper kinds of liver grind it and combine it with other foods for such dishes as creamed liver, liver hash, liver and rice loaf and liver croquettes. Liver salad may be made from chopped liver, raw cabbage and onions.

HATS AND BAGS OF FLEXIBLE WOOD LATEST STYLE WRINKLE

THE HAT you're apt to be unpacking from its bandbox and soft tissue wrappings might be one of the new "owoden" hats (zebra, walnut or oak)! There's no doubt that materials have taken the spotlight this season. Use your slyest imagination for the task of deciding what-next in fabrics. Few would conjure up a notion to use real wood! First it was a brilliant bag designer who took these fine woods, cut and sandpapered to parchment thinness, and worked them with the same detail he would give to leather. Next, hat designers made models with crowns, brims and bands made of the same soft pliable veneers. The real thing! Nothing could be less obvious!

* * *

LET'S TURN to the accompanying sketch. In the upper corner is a handsome peaked navy linen hat with brim of zebra wood. The texture has the appearance of moire, with a woody grain. On the crown, high up, tiny strips of shaved wood curl heavenward. The wooden bag with it is one of many distinctive shapes. The wood is left unfinished in its lovely neutral tones and the large ornaments are of solid darker polished wood. Linings and fittings are bright plaid or plain linen. Carry these with your summer tailleurs and cottons. In the lower corner the milliner added a simple flexible wood band to the crown of the linen sailor with new pinched crown. This one is a "must-have" in the summer. There are few things more flattering than white hats and they go with almost every daytime thing.

* * *

THE GLOVES are a knitted linen two-way-stretch fabric. They may be bought only in one size, since the same glove fits dainty fingers as well as husky athletes' fists! The wood cuffs are selected in a veneer to match the bag. Believe it or not, these gloves are washable, the only worry comes during the ironing. Care must be taken not to press a crease into the wood and thus cause cracking.

* * *

THE OTHER bags: One is white leather with rows of metal running horizontally, a place on the flap for matching metal initials; another a finely checked tropical tweed with unusual metal scalloped edges at top and bottom. Last, a solid linen square shaped envelope. The crystal ball at one end has a metal marker that also cries out for a smart monogram.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Proper Contract

Probably more arguments arise at the Bridge table over the question as to what suit should become the trump when the partners fail to hold what is known as a fit—that is, when one partner lacks support for the other and vice versa—than over anything else. Obviously, it is generally better to play hands with eight trumps between the partnership than with seven or six, but occasionally a situation arises where a shorter number of trumps for the combined hands should be chosen because of the practical solidity of the trump holding, and thus the guarantee against the loss of more than one trick in the suit.

Recently there was played in a San Francisco club the hand below, which resulted in rather strenuous argument and, finally, in my being asked to arbitrate on the bidding. The actual contract was seven diamonds, which was defeated.

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

♠ A K Q 10
♡ A K 5
◇ A K 9 8 6
♣ 9

	North
West		East
	South

♠ 4 3
♡ 7 6
◇ J 7 5
♣ A K Q 10 7 2

The correct bidding:

North	South
2 ♡	3 ♣
3 ♡ (1)	4 ♣ (2)
5 N T (3)	6 ♣ (4)
Pass

1—Showing the second biddable suit in the hand.

2—There is no occasion for South to bid more than four clubs, which shows rebid strength in the suit, as the bidding must continue until at least a game is reached.

3—North must take definite action, looking toward a Slam, as it is entirely possible that South might drop the bid of five diamonds or five clubs or four spades. The game contract would then have been reached, and the obligation of the Force would no longer exist.

4—South rightly insists upon playing the hand in clubs. With anything except the most freakish distribution, there is but a single club loser. Moreover, if North becomes the Declarer, and if he is void of clubs or has only a singleton, it may be impossible for him to utilize the South hand at all, whereas South, with the assurance given by the Opening bid of two in a suit, knows that he may enter the North hand at will.

Ordinarily it is an important matter to have a fit in the trump suit, but there is no rule without its exceptions. When a hand might prove to be void of entries if the longer of two possible suits were selected, and when the shorter suit is virtually solid, these factors should certainly be taken into consideration.

Today's Question

You hold

♠ K 10 7 ♡ 10 9 8 4 ◇ Q 10 7 6 ♣ Q 8

You are vulnerable. Your partner, Third Hand, has opened the bidding with one notrump and the next hand has passed. What do you bid?

Answer: Two notrump. Your hand contains 1½ honor-tricks, which is more than enough honor strength to raise a vulnerable notrump bid, which, in itself, should have at least 4 honor-tricks.

HERE'S HOW I LOST WEIGHT

AND HOW I FOUND ENERGY

I ALMOST RUINED MY HEALTH THE FIRST TIME I TRIED DIETING. THE DOCTOR GAVE ME A TERRIFIC TALKING TO AND SOME OF THE SANEST ADVICE A WOMAN EVER HAD.
THE ONLY REASON I'M HERE WITH MY WIFE IS THAT SHE THINKS YOU'D LIKE TO HEAR WHAT WELCH'S DO FOR ME··· IN THE INTEREST OF YOUR HUSBAND'S HEALTH.
HE TOLD ME TO SUBSTITUTE WELCH'S PASTEURIZED GRAPE JUICE FOR HIGH CALORY FOODS AND TO DRINK A PINT A DAY.
A FEW MONTHS AGO I WAS TIRED, IRRITABLE, SO EASILY EXHAUSTED I COULD HARDLY GET THROUGH THE DAY'S ROUTINE
IT SEEMS THAT ITS SIMPLE GRAPE SUGARS ARE NOT STORED AS FAT, THEY'RE PREDIGESTED, SO THE BLOOD CAN USE THEM RIGHT AWAY FOR ENERGY.
I STARTED DRINKING WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE AND FOUND IMMEDIATE STRENGTH AND ENERGY.
ITS POTASSIUM REMOVES UNNECESSARY WATER FROM BODY TISSUE. ITS IRON HELPS THE COMPLEXION, AND ITS MAGNESIUM BEAUTIFIES THE HAIR.
IT ENDED MY ACIDITY, PROVED AN UNFAILING REGULATOR, AND GAVE ME MORE VITAMIN B THAN I GET FROM ORANGE JUICE.
I'VE LOST OVER TEN POUNDS AND NEVER FELT BETTER IN MY LIFE··· THANKS TO WELCH'S. WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT TOO?
THE DOCTOR WILL TELL YOU THAT ITS A FINE HEMOGLOBIN (RED CORPUSCLE) RESTORATIVE, AND I'LL TELL YOU I JUST FEEL GRAND.

Let Welch's help you take off weight

Scientists now insist that Welch's should be on every reducing or weight-control diet, to insure healthful reduction. It gives quick energy and strength. Satisfies the craving for sweets and rich, fattening foods. Start the day right with a glass before breakfast. Drink Welch's during the day as you like, and before retiring. Continue for a few days—then see the difference.

But insist on Welch's . . . because it is the Welch Process that retains in the bottled juice the healthful properties of ripe grapes essential to the system. Only Welch's is Certified Pure and Pasteurized. It contains no adulterants, no synthetic flavors, no artificial coloring, no preservatives, no water. And above all it contains no tartaric acid. It's PASTEURIZED PURE!

BASEBALL'S GREATS PRIMED FOR ALL-STAR FRAY

SPORT COMMENT

THEVENOW'S COACHING HELP TO ARKY

ONE THING THAT Tommy Thevenow did while filling Tony Piet's place at second base for the Pirates during a recent stretch was to work a very noticeable improvement in the playing of Arky Vaughan. The youthful Buccaneer, who deserves the major portion of the credit for yesterday's victory, both offensively and defensively, is a much better shortstop as a result of the coaching he got from Thevenow, and the steadying influence of the veteran, while the two were teamed around the midway.

Arky Vaughan

Vaughan, who brought his own batting punch to the majors with him, is a much smoother fielder since Thevenow played at his side for two weeks, particularly in going to his left, as he showed in his one-hand pickup of Pat Crawford's fast grounder near second base in the eighth. That he is also steadier and cooler was demonstrated in the way he recovered the ball after breaking down Joe Medwick's smash in the same inning to throw out the batter at first base and retire the side with the tying run headed for the plate. Last year, Arky probably would have hesitated just long enough to lose the play.

THE GREAT FORM that carried the Cards up the ladder in recent weeks was not in evidence in the series here. They looked very ordinary, barring the colorful Pepper Martin. Neither club was overly impressive in yesterday's game, and the outcome was more a matter of determining which was the poorer team of the day than which was the better one.

That the Redbirds have slowed down considerably is evidenced by the fact that of their last 15 games they have won only four. The records of the leading three clubs against one another present one of baseball's peculiar angles. The Giants have beaten the Pirates five out of seven games, and the Cards have beaten the Giants seven out of 10, yet the Bucs have trimmed the Redbirds eight out of 12.

AFTER FACING ALL five of Bill Terry's starting pitchers, the Reds voted Bud Parmalee the hardest to hit, saying that his fast ball sails and dips faster than the eye can follow, and that when he has control it's almost impossible to beat him.

The Bushmen think a composite Giant pitcher would make a slab ideal—a fast ball like Parmalee's, a screw ball like Hubbell's, a downer like Schumacher's, a curve like Clark's, and a knuckle ball like that of Fitzsimmons.

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a ball club welcomes the end of a home stay and the coming of a chance to play on the road, but no doubt that's the attitude of the Cleveland Indians toward the present change in their schedule. The Eastern trip on which they start tomorrow may have a helpful bearing on their fortunes. For Cleveland is one club that is handicaped by its own grounds. The team was constructed to take advantage of the short right-field wall at the old park, and has been unable to function since moving to the huge stadium. The Indians have been trying, without success, to change their batting style to suit the new big field. Earl Averill has been the chief sufferer. Always a hitter well above .300, he is now down to .280. Last year he made 32 home runs. This season he has made only three. Averill's slump alone would have been enough to cost the club many games. Of their last 29 contests at home, the Indians have lost 18.

Johnny Jackson

THOUGH JOHNNY JACKSON, former University of Pennsylvania pitcher who will be here with the Phillies tomorrow, has been notably effective against big league batters since he broke in, he keeps the fans wondering how he does it. For the ex-collegian is not an impressive worker on the mound. There is no suggestion of extraordinary stuff or power.

What Frankie Frisch calls a "dead ball" is Jackson's chief stock in trade. "The harder you swing at it, the more softly you hit it," Frisch says. "It is a dead ball. It sails or spins or does something that isn't natural. I'll bet Jackson himself doesn't know he throws it—or how he does it. The ball appears to be coming up fast, and it spins up to the plate like a top. As long as Jackson keeps it he will be hard to beat."

MENTION OF JACKSON brings to mind the fact that 1933 was a prosperous year for college baseball in the East. The pitching was the best in many seasons, and it kept the major league scouts rushing from campus to campus. They signed an unusual number of collegians to big-time contracts.

Aside from the acquisition of Jackson by the Phils, the Yankees grabbed Johnny Broaca, of Yale, Ray White, of Columbia, and Johnny Hassett, of Manhattan, while the A's signed Joe Zapustas, of Fordham, and Raymond Francis Coombs, of Duke.

THOUGH PETE ZEREMBA, Aliquippa resident and New York U. football player and hammer thrower, finished only fourth in the national A. A. U. senior hammer-throwing championship at Chicago last week, Dean Cromwell, Southern California track coach, considers him the country's best in college competition and picks him for that event on an all-America track team. Cromwell selects only one of his own men, Bill Graber, in the pole vault. The remainder of the Trojan mentor's all-America team follows: Sprints, Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette; 440 yards, Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State; 880 yards, Charles Hornbostel, Indiana; mile, Glenn Cunningham, Kansas; two miles, Bill Bonthron, Princeton; high hurdles, Gus Meier, Stanford; low hurdles, Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State; shot put, Jack Torrance, Louisiana State; discus, Henri LaBorde, Stanford; javelin, Duane Purvis, Purdue; high jump, Walter Marty, Fresno State; broad jump, John Brooks, Chicago; relay, Jimmy LuValle, U. C. L. A.; Hardin, Louisiana State; Harry Jones, Pennsylvania, and Ivan Fuqua, Indiana.

WHILE THE FANS in this part of the country are sweltering, the Northwest is talking football, and predictions are being made that Coach Babe Hollingbery will have one of the best teams in the land at Washington State. One of the expected standouts is a giant end who towers 6 feet 7½ inches.

The particular hero, however, is to be a backfield player, a sophomore named Mangus, from Texas. According to the modest claims of the publicity department, Mangus "passes on a dime and wins pocket money in practice by betting half-dollars on his ability to punt the ball out of bounds within the opposition's 10-yard line."

IF THE NEW commissioner, William J. Brown, has his way, some changes may be made in the New York boxing regulations. For one thing, he plans to weed out incompetent officials and replace them with men who know the game and who possess both courage and brains. Too, he would compel referees and judges to give in writing their reasons for decisions, not mere scores in figures.

Brown also believes there are too many officials, and that the knockdown timekeeper, at least, is superfluous. He admits he can't do anything about the judges, as long as the law provides for them, but he thinks a capable and honest referee is all that is needed to decide bouts satisfactorily. Nor, like many others, does he like the system of awarding decisions according to the number of rounds won.

William J. Brown

BROWN, INTIMATELY ASSOCIATED with boxing for many years and once pronounced by Tex Rickard the best referee in the country, says he is one of the old-timers who always will insist that the fighters of long ago never have been equaled. "The only heavyweight of modern times who measured up to some of the former champions was Jack Dempsey," the commissioner adds. "I say this because he was a powerful hitter, carrying a knockout in either hand, and that is what the public wants to see, a slugger who can drop an opponent with a single punch. The Schmeling-Baer fight was an honest one and satisfied the crowd, but in my opinion, Kid McCoy, one of the greatest light-heavyweights that ever drew on a glove, could have whipped either of them."

CORSAIRS EARN REST WITH WIN OVER CARDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The doings of Pie and Paul and the other diamond luminaries in Chicago held the Pirates in rapt attention today, although many of the Buccos hied themselves to the links to partake of the joys of the Scotch game.

There will be no battle scenes at the Oakland Orchard until Saturday, when the Phillies and Pirates clash in a dual bill. Today and tomorrow are open dates in deference to the all-star contest at the home of the White Sox.

The Freebooters made some nice hay in the July sunshine of yesterday. It looked like old times to see a Buccaneer club come from behind to overcome a five-run lead.

TAKE A BOW, ARKY!

Arky Vaughan was the Pittsburgh hero of the afternoon. Arky connected for a two-out, three-run homer in the fifth that put the Oaklanders in the old ball game. In the seventh the Pirates put over a three-run rally that gave them a 7-6 victory.

Arky had to share the honors of the day with Pepper Martin, sometimes referred to as the Wild Horse of the Osage. There are many people who think the National League club performing in Chicago today should have Martin in a regular position, even if he had to go to the mound. The great hustler nicked Pirate pitching for five hits, and he scored four of his club's runs.

MEINE WEAKENS AGAIN

The game was the longest nine-inning fight of the season at Forbes Field, yet, although it was slow in procedure, the contest was loaded with scintillating action.

Heinie Meine made another false start on the slab. After his winning streak of five victories, which marked the first month of the season, Heine has been almost a total loss. Waite Hoyt was given credit for the victory, although Smith and Larry French were on the mound.

The wheel which dropped off shortly after they took off in Japanese waters was found floating off Cape Flattery, about 200 miles from Wenatchee, by Captain Braggen, of the schooner Preshoon, February 10, 1933. It thus had been slowly meandering along the course of the flight across 4,400 miles of ocean.

TOMORROW: THE LOVE-PROOFED MAIDENS

SELLOUT CROWD ATTENDS GAME IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—Two hand-picked teams of baseball stars and 49,000 fans were primed today for the game they have talked about for years, but never expected would come to pass.

At Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox, 18 American League stars, deemed by the fans as the pick of the organization, gathered under the leadership of Connie Mack, to make the game's greatest one-day stand, against John Joseph McGraw and his 18 selected National League greats.

LINEUPS SET

Mack and McGraw already had made their starting lineup selections, with the exception of the pitchers, but called meetings this morning to make final battle plans. With Mack were his coaches for a day, Eddie Collins and Art Fletcher, while McGraw had a pair of managers, Max Carey, of Brooklyn, and Will McKechnie, of Boston, as his aides.

The pitching selections offered plenty of material for conjecture. On the basis of their work and popularity with the fans, Bob Grove, the Athletics' fireballer, and Carl Hubbell, the New York Giants' brilliant southpaw, were in line for the starting jobs. However, Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, and the National League's first baseman today, was not so keen about using Hubbell.

Terry felt that Hubbell's value to the leaders of the National League should be considered ahead of anything else. Furthermore Hubbell last Sunday pitched an 18-inning triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals, and might still be in need of rest. Bill Hallahan, the Cardinal southpaw, a highly successful operator against American League batting in world series encounters, was just as good a guess.

Hal Schumacher, young New York righthander, and Lonnie Warneke, of the Cubs, were the other members of the staff.

CROWDER READY

If not Grove, Alvin Crowder, of Washington, was considered the likely American League starter, with Wes Ferrell and Oral Hildebrand, of Cleveland, and Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees, also available.

In the American League front were such famous sluggers as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Al Simmons, Earl Averill, Joe Cronin and Bill Dickey. The elder league countered with Chuck Klein, Frank Frisch, Terry, Paul Waner, Lefty O'Doul, Pie Traynor and Gabby Hartnett.

All receipts, other than the amount required to pay expenses, were to go to the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, which cares for the game's aged and infirm.

HICKEY PARK CARD SET

The card has been completed for the boxing show at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night.

Tony Herrera, of Chicago, and Ley Raymond, of Baltimore, box the main bout of 10 rounds.

Fritzie Zivic, of Lawrenceville, and Don Asto, of Uniontown, stage a return bout in the semi-final, and in two other six-round preliminaries, Max Elling, of the Hill, opposes Al Becker, of Sheraden, and Johnny Durso, of Oakland, meets Mike Barto, of New Kensington.

BENEFIT FRAY SET

Two of the leaders in the Indoor Polo League will meet again Saturday afternoon in a benefit game at the New Kensington athletic field. The game will be staged by the Vanga and Shady Side and will be held under the auspices of the American Legion of New Kensington for the benefit of the relief fund.

MY LIFE STORY

The Carnera Family in Sequals, Italy—A Youngster During the World War. Hungry Days—Primo Joins a Circus

(This autobiography is a translation from the Italian of Primo Carnera's remarkably clear memories of his career thus far. The new world heavyweight boxing champion can speak English sufficiently to be understood, but, in preparing his life story, he preferred to do so in his native tongue. So far as is possible, the translation preserves the ideas and spirit of the champion.)

CHAPTER TWO

IN THE BACKWASH OF THE WORLD WAR

By PRIMO CARNERA, World Heavyweight Champion

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I was born in the village of Sequals, Italy, about 60 miles northwest of the historic city of Venice, 27 years ago this coming October—on the twenty-fifth of that month, to be exact. My father and mother—Sante and Giovanna Carnera—are still living and in the best of health at this writing, I am most happy to know, as are my brothers, Secundo and Severiano, who are twins. The latter has been in the United States for several years.

Primo Carnera

Nearly everyone who visited my recent training camp at Pompton Lakes, N. Y., either met or saw "Sev." The youngest in our family, he is my particular pal. Like Secundo, who has been living in London for some time, Severiano is a skilled mosaic worker — a trade at which I, too, might have been expert had not wanderlust seized me when I was in my early 'teens. I took to the road with a little circus as a wrestler and strong and handy man. But I am getting ahead of my life story; I must learn, they tell me, to pace that as much as an experienced boxer does his work in the ring.

There were hardly more than 300 residents of Sequals at the time of my birth there in 1906, and there are not many more than that today. But of all the great places I have visited and enjoyed from Paris to San Francisco, from London to New York—yes, even Rome and Venice themselves—I think most fondly of my tiny native village, the folks there, and the neighbors who, I am sure, think more of me than all the rest of the world combined.

Every chance I have I return to Sequals, where, I am sorry to say, I was not of much promise as a boy. I was unusually big when very young and preferred all play and no work. School had little attraction for me, and Sunday school even less. I always wanted to travel places and even see far-off Venice—the Queen City, as we all called it.

When I was about 8 years old, the World War broke out. That did not mean so much to Sequals at first, but, soon after Italy joined the Allies, the pinch of war began to be felt. We were close to operations on the Italian-Austrian front. Most of the young men of the village joined the Italian Army, goods were requisitioned right and left, and mosaic work came to a standstill. There was no time for such decorative work in northern Italy from 1915 on through 1918.

So, when I was scarcely more than 8, I was apprenticed to a cabinet maker. That was about 1915, I think, and for nearly four years—through the whole grim war—I hauled timber, planed planks, and studied (not as well as I should) the trade of a woodworker. That business, too, suffered much with armies pushing back and forth through the Province of Udine. Well—

SAVED BY YOUTH

Many will say I was lucky at that, for, had I been but a few years older, the future "Ambling Alp" might have been buried among the mountains of that name. Though I did not reach my 'teens until after the Armistice, I could do an average laborer's work long before that. I was as big as, and perhaps stronger than the average man by my twelfth birthday. That was in 1918, about two weeks before peace came.

While I was strong enough to do a man's work and fairly skilled for an apprentice at both cabinet and mosaic work, I wanted to travel. In the first place, I wanted to visit places. Venice and Paris were then about the limits of such dreams. In the second place, I could not earn enough to eat as a trades apprentice in Italy. Such wages were never high, but the war had driven them down to all but nothing. While food was plentiful and most of it cheap, my rapidly growing body demanded more of it than my salary of $4 a week could buy. So I tramped off to France early in 1919 and got a job near Toulouse as a day laborer.

How horribly hungry I used to be in those days and for quite a time afterwards! First, I was a cement mixer. Many a time I felt like eating the concrete! Later on I worked as a bricklayer, my previous knowledge of mosaics helping me some on that job. From town to town I wandered for about four years at hard labor most of the time. Yet I could scarcely earn enough (never more than a dollar a day) to buy sufficient food.

WORE WEIRD CLOTHING

Only necessity put a curb on my appetite, and perhaps that was well. For when I could afford it, I did eat too much and I put on fat quickly.

Strange as I may appear to the sporting public now, I was weird indeed in my youthful days. I dressed as a peasant—a self-tailored smock, a pick-up felt hat (when I could find one), and self-made shoes (they were really sandals lined with burlap) being the principal parts of my clothing. I believe that, with enough leather (and you will admit it would require considerable), I still can cobble a pretty fair pair of sandals for myself. And—if I ever take up art seriously—I can serve as my own dressmaker so far as smocks and trousers go.

With those garments and that footwear in mind, just picture Primo the laborer of 1919-1924. I reached my height of 6-foot-6 in those years and—in spite of hunger—fat forced my usual weight to about 285 pounds.

BECOMES STRONG MAN

Surely I must have been both a fierce yet funny sight the day I sauntered up to the barker of a small circus that was playing just outside Toulouse. It was such a tiny show, but that announcer had a voice as powerful as that of Bill Duffy, my American manager, or that of Joe Humphries, my friend, who is the Cicero of boxing's orators. There was a professional strong man with this circus who posed on a platform and did some simple lifting to help draw patrons to the ticket gate. I was watching this fellow do his stunts when the barker, noticing my unusual size, invited me to try the weights. Really, they were just too light. Yet the barker, the strong man, and others were surprised. They invited me in to see the show—and that marked my debut in the world of sports.

For inside I saw professional wrestling for the first time. Really, the strong man (he doubled in weight-lifting) was hardly more skilled than a raw amateur, but he challenged the patrons and threw them with ease. Afterwards, when the show was over he asked me if I had ever wrestled and I told him I had done so often as a boy. So he offered to give me some lessons, but from the start I had no difficulty in throwing him—not through skill, but through brute strength. As a result, that circus added another strong man to its payroll at a wage of slightly more than a dollar a day with—and this was most important—food thrown in. And how that lifting and wrestling all comers increased my already mammoth appetite!

CIRCUS GOES BROKE

With money scarce and paying crowds poor, indeed, we traveled from village to village for almost four years. When not performing, I did general circus hand chores with the show—often working like a horse and eating twice as much.

Humorists often have said since that I ate that circus out of business. At any event, it broke up after about four years, and I found myself among the unemployed in the south of France in 1928. Now and then I would get brief jobs as a laborer, but they were few and far between. I was reduced almost to beggary and many a time I felt like returning home. But I hated to do so, a complete failure. Meanwhile, hunger was making me almost desperate. I did manage to consume huge amounts of raw vegetables, often rooted from the fields at night. But that was not enough for me.

Then came the biggest break in my life thus far—my chance meeting Paul Journee, famous French heavyweight boxer, more than five years ago. I shall never forget that day. I was down in the mouth, weary from walking about looking for work in vain—fat on the surface from eating too much when I had the opportunity, and hungrier than ever, it seemed.

MEETS PAUL JOURNEE

Trudging along a dusty, white, sunburn road, I happened to see another big fellow coming my way. His clothes were magnificent compared to mine. He stared at me, started to walk past and then spoke pleasantly. Now I smile and laugh readily. The stranger and I were soon chatting. Never before had I heard of boxing. I was to hear much of it from that stranger, who proved to be Paul Journee. Fortune trumpeted it in my ears as I listened to the veteran boxer on the lonely road that summer day.

WALTER CARDS 72; DUDLEY SECOND

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 6.—(INS.)—Climaxing a day of sensational scores, Abe Mitchell, British veteran of many years' competition, carded a 68 today for a 142 total, to take third place behind Walter Hagen, who had 140, and Ed Dudley, of the United States, who had 141, in the second round of the British Open golf championship.

Henry Cotton, of England, held fourth place with 144, while Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel and Joe Kirkwood, of the United States, shared fifth place with 145.

Sarazen, the defending champion, tossed away a great chance to overhaul the pace-setters by taking 40 strokes for the last nine holes. A great controversy raged in the surging gallery as to whether Gene took three or four shots to get out of the bunker on the eleventh. Many insisted he had four blows in the sand, but the markers said three, so did Sarazen, and that stood.

EXTREMELY STEADY

Hagen, who today added a 72, one under par, to his 68 of yesterday, played steady golf all the way around, putting for birdies on every hole of the out nine and never being in trouble. His card:

Out	444	444	434	—35
In	444	355	444	—37—72—140

Dudley added a brilliant 71 to his 70 of yesterday for his total of 141. His card:

Dudley—
Out	4	4	4	4	5	4	4	3	4—36
In	3	3	5	4	4	4	4	4	4—37—71—141

George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, paced all amateurs in the competition by adding a 74 to his 72 of yesterday for a total of 146. He was tied at this figure by Densmore Shute, who had a 73 today.

FARRELL RALLIES

Johnny Farrell, well back with a 78 for the first round, came back with a blazing 71 today. His 36-hole score of 148 was one stroke better than those of Craig Wood and Joe Ezar, the "Wild Texan," both of whom carded 72's today.

Bringing up the rear among the invaders were C. Ross Somerville, Canadian holder of the U. S. amateur title, with 151; Olin Dutra, with 152; Paul Runyan, with 152, and Billy Burke, with 159.

The scores, showing yesterday's round, today's score and the 36-hole totals:

Ed Dudley, Concordville, Pa.	70	71	—141
Horton Smith, Chicago	73	73	—146
Joe Ezar, Waco, Texas	77	72	—149

Brushton Opens New Field Tonight

The new Morgan baseball field, Bennett street, Brushton, will be officially opened at 6:30 this evening when the J. Scott Morgans will oppose the Brushton team there.

A parade and band concert will precede the game, and Mayor John S. Herron will throw out the first ball.

Pie and Paul Thrilled By All-Star Spectacle

By HAROLD J. (PIE) TRAYNOR, Captain of Pirates.
(Written Especially for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

(NOTE—Pie Traynor and Paul Waner, Pirate stars, are at their respective posts this afternoon in the "Century of Progress" game in Chicago. In the accompanying article the Pirate captain sets down his advance impressions of the contest.)

COMISKEY PARK, CHICAGO, July 6.—This home of the White Sox certainly presents a colorful scene for the interesting inter-league clash of this afternoon. It's great to be a part of it, and Paul Waner and I are tickled to represent the Pirates in such a spectacle.

The National and American League clubs are garbed in bright new uniforms and we were all glad to hear that we may keep the uniforms for precious souvenirs. I trust that at some future time Pittsburgh will be able to stage a similar contest, for there is much appeal to a game of this nature.

The Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, the organization which cares for the unfortunate veterans of baseball, will reap a harvest. I would like to say here that this body has done wonderful work since it was organized. Paul and I both belong to it, as do many other Pirates; in fact, most of the players of the major leagues and many in the minors are members. I understand the association will receive all of the receipts other than the amount required to pay the expenses.

The players in the game do not share in the receipts.

The large outpouring of fans, many of whom came early, seems to be enjoying the preliminaries. Babe Ruth and others are being cheered to the scho and the whole picture has a real holiday aspect.

McDairmid Victor In Title Tourney

CHICAGO, July 6.—(AP.)—Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., one of the prime favorites, was missing today as the national clay courts tennis championship tournament went into the critical stage.

Grant, who defeated Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, in the finals of the tri-state tournament last week, got a surprise 6-4, 6-4 beating from John McDairmid, of Fort Worth, Tex. Along with him went George Ball, El Paso, Tex., who was no match for Parker, the top seeded player and outstanding favorite, and took a 6-0, 6-0 trouncing.

Parker reached the quarter-finals and today was opposed by Berkeley Bell, of Austin, Tex., who eliminated Milton Ruehl, Milwaukee, 6-3, 6-1.

Fritzi Stifel Wins W. Va. Golf Title

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. s Va., July 6.—(AP.)—Mis Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, today captured her sixth West Virginia women's golf championship.

With a string of seven pars on the first nine holes of an 18-hole final match, she easily conquered Mrs. M. M. Moorhead, of Charleston, 8 and 6, ending the clash on the twelfth green.

Outplaying his youthful opponent in all departments, Fred Bannerot, Jr., of Charleston, today triumphed over Kirk Jackson, 17-year-old Wheeling player, in the quarter-final round of the men's championship, 6 and 4.

Bobby Lowe, of Fairmont, trounced Forrest McNeill, of Clarksburg, 5 and 4.

U. S. SCULLER DEFEATED

HENLEY, England, July 6.—(AP.)—Winthrop Rutherfurd, Jr., Princeton amateur rowing coach and last of three American entries in the Diamond Sculls, was eliminated by C. G. Askwith, Cambridge University oarsman, today as two American school eights, Kent and Hun, won their heats in the Royal Henley Regatta.

Rutherfurd lost by three lengths to Askwith in 8 minutes 43 seconds, following into defeat Art Strang, of Princeton, and R. B. Cutler, of Harvard, both of whom were eliminated in the opening heats yesterday. Rutherfurd won his first brush yesterday from E. G. H. Thompson.

The Kent (Conn.) School crew made its first start in the regatta a winning one, rowing to impressive victory in the first round of the Thames Challenge Cup competition over Jesus College, of Cambridge. Kent's winning time was 7 minutes 18 seconds.

Hun School, of Princeton, N. J., kept pace with Kent as they defeated Kingston Rowing Club, also in the first round of the Thames Cup, winning by a third of a length in 7 minutes 28 seconds. They won by about the same margin over Trinity in a preliminary heat yesterday.

TEAM CHANGES NAME

BOSTON, July 6. — (AP.) — George Marshall, owner of the Boston professional football team, has changed its name from Braves to Redskins, due to confusion which has been caused by the team wearing the same name as the Boston National League baseball club.

HELEN JACOBS BEATEN, MRS. MOODY WINS

WIMBLEDON, England, July 6. —(AP.) — Miss Dorothy Round, second ranked British girl, scored a surprising victory over Miss Helen Jacobs, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, in the semi-final round of the women's singles in the annual Wimbledon championships today.

The victory qualified her to meet Helen Moody, defending champion, in the final round.

Miss Round, a splendid stylist, but hardly considered the equal of the California girl, rallied superbly after losing the first set, narrowly edged out the second and swept on to victory by a decisive margin in the third. Miss Jacobs' defeat cost her her chance to face her fellow-Californian, Mrs. Moody, in the final round for the second straight year and the third time since their long rivalry started in Berkeley, Cal., years ago.

MRS. MOODY VICTOR

Mrs. Moody, five times champion and a heavy favorite to win the coming final, swept through the semi-nal round this morning fiwith a straight-set victory over Fraulein Hilda Krahwinkel, of Germany, 6-4, 6-3. Her past Wimbledon title victories were scored in 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1932.

A pair of defending champions, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, France's veteran team, won a fifth round match in the ... doubles, beating the crack young South Africans, Vernon Kirby and Nat Farquharson, in five hards sets, 5-7, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

JAP TEAM ADVANCES

Jiro Satoh and A. Nunoi, Japanese stars, qualified to meet Borotra and Brugnon in the final of the men doubles by eliminating the French hard court champions, George Patrick Hughes and Fred Perry, of England, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Mrs. Elsie Goldsack Pittman and Joan Ridley, English women's doubles pair, defeated Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall, fellow countrywomen, in the fifth round of the women's play, 6-8, 8-6, 6-1.

The American contingent suffered another setback when Elizabeth Ryan, of the United States, and Enrique Maier, of Spain, were defeated in the fifth round of the mixed doubles by Fraulein Krahwinkel and Gottfried von Cramm, 6-1, 7-5.

PRIMO TALKS OF 'DOUGH,' 'GRANDS'

NEW YORK, July 6.—(Ins.)—Primo Carnera, looking like a million dollars in a gay tan suit, brilliant haberdashery and an expansive smile, went before Peter Olney, bankruptcy referee, today and testified he was practically broke.

His account in the Banca Commerciale Italiana, he swore, contained but a trifling $66. Referee Olney asked:

"How about the profits from the championship fight?"

"I no see dat mon'."

Carnera didn't seem worried about it. He launched into a long explanation of how the money was tied up and that his profits were contingent on another fight. Nobody, including Primo, seemed clear about it.

'NO GOT DOUGH'

The referee persisted:

"But you must have some money. Champions make a lot of money."

Again the Carnera shrug.

"I no got dough."

His tone grew complaining:

"Everybody want dough, dough, dough. I no got any dough."

Carnera, who filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy soon after Emilia Tersini, London waitress, was awarded $14,390 in a breach of promise against the giant pugilist, admitted, in answer to questions, that he owned "some prop" in California.

"How much did you pay for this property?"

"Fifteen grand."

TRUSTEE NAMED

Did he have any cash out there? Carnera was uncertain, but testified that he had left $565 with his agent there. He also confessed ownership of an automobile in Pompton Lakes.

Referee Olney postponed the case until August 15 and appointed the Irving Trust Company as trustee of Carnera's assets.

AVOID SHAVING IRRITATION URGES SKIN CLINIC!

SERIOUS skin trouble is traced to faulty shaving by the Gillette Skin Clinic. This department, headed by an eminent dermatologist, was founded because of the prevalence of disorders caused or aggravated by shaving.

"Avoid irritation, if you would keep your skin clear and free from blemishes," warns the Skin Clinic. "Irritation lessens the self-protective action of the normal skin and favors skin troubles. Be sure to use a sharp blade, because a sharp blade is not irritating to normal skin."

This advice, issued by the Skin Clinic, is based upon independent research and a nation-wide survey conducted among doctors and dermatologists. The "BLUE BLADE" is made to meet the requirements of skin specialists. It is extremely sharp—23% to 42% sharper than other blades examined by photo-electric method in a recent competitive test.

To avoid skin irritation—and enjoy a degree of shaving comfort you may never have experienced—we urge you to try the "BLUE BLADE". Gillette Safety Razor Company, Boston, Mass.

O'LOUGHLINS SEEK TITLE IN DOUBLES

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The revival edition of the Allegheny County tennis championships offers final jousts in men's and women's doubles on the Westinghouse Club courts, Greensburg pike, Wilkinsburg, this afternoon. In the two man windup, the major tussle of the day, Dr. Dave and Dr. John O'Loughlin, Western Pennsylvania premiers, engage the Philadelphia-Greensburg array of Bill Haseltine and Tack Hammer at 5 o'clock.

The feminine affair, wherein Margaret Carspecken and Miriam Sullivan, Morgantown-P. A. A. pair, battle the survivors of semi-final joust bringing together Dolly Harris, of Edgewood, and Mrs. Jean Artzberger, of Mount Lebanon, with Peggy Painter, Allegheny Country Club contender, and a partner yet to be selected, will precede the masculine debate.

O'LOUGHLINS ADVANCE

The O'Loughlins gained the semi-finals yesterday with decisive 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 triumph over the veteran Mount Lebanon outfit of Neal Rumsey and Russ Unger.

Haseltine and Hammer scrimmaged through two contests to attain the trophy bracket. In quarter-final fray they downed the Pitt products, Jim Slocum and Harry Wald, 6-4, 6-2, and later, in penultimate skirmish, they battered Bill Clardy and Stan McCaskey, Westinghouse-Edgewood crew, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Miss Carspecken and Miss Sullivan achieved the women's doubles finale at expense of Dorothy Miller, Winged Head luminary, and Sana Mouroumseff, of Wilkinsburg, 6-1, 6-3.

With county competition monopolizing the home card, Billy O'Loughlin and Paul Sullivan, P. A. A. combination, journey to Johnstown today for combat in defense of their Southern Pennsylvania men's doubles crown against Dave Devlin and Charles Kunkle, Jr., Cambria satellites, at the Westmont Tennis Club.

LOCKHART WINS TITLE

Charles Lockhart defeated W. H. Brown, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 to win the singles title in the annual Allegheny Country Club tennis tournament yesterday. The men's and mixed doubles titles were decided Tuesday and the women's doubles final will be played this week-end, either Saturday or Sunday.

Duane Littell, of College Hill, and Fred Snodgrass, of Beaver Falls, will clash tomorrow for the singles title in the Beaver County closed 10 tournament. Snodgrass gained the final round by defeating Albert Ong, of Beaver Falls, 6-4, 6-3, yesterday, while Littell eliminated Ed Fouse, of Aliquappa, 7-5, 9-7.

Eldred-Manning Win Golf Match

In one of the best matches of the season, Vincent Eldred, of the Highland Country Club, paired with Charley Manning, of Shannopin, to defeat Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, and Toots Erath, of Edgewood, in a best-ball match, 2 and 1, yesterday. The match was played at Oakmont.

Bob Graham, professional at the Schenley Park links, equalled the course record yesterday, shooting a 60, six under par. Jock Hutchison shot a 58 some years ago, but the course has undergone many changes since that time.

Fight Results

At New York — Isadoro Gastanaga, Bellolse defeated Mickey Barron, 6 rounds. Charley Massera and Bob Olin drew, 10 rounds.

At Chicago—Johnny Phagan defeated Jackey Purvis, 8 rounds. Bob Stone knocked out Bill Bennett, 4 rounds.

At Inglewood, Cal.—Meyer Grace knocked out Pete Grosso, 2 round. Maxie Barr defeated Jack Grange, 6 rounds. Billy Yaliowitz knocked out Eddie Cool, 1 round.

KENNEDY STOPPED

NEW YORK, July 6 (AP)—Isadoro Gastanaga, Spanish heavyweight last night knocked out Lee Kennedy, of Long Beach, Cal., in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round bout. Gastanaga weighed 191 pounds and Kennedy, a sparring partner of Primo Carnera, 192. An overhand right to the head ended the bout at 2:07 of the first round. The Spaniard dropped the Westerner with a vicious right and sent him down again with a long left.

All About John L. Hernon And His Turtle Soup

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor

If you know of a busier man these days than John L. Hernon, president, secretary and treasurer and town crier of the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, you can have him by merely naming him.

John calls up in what with him passes for an indignant voice. Says he:

"What is it, a secret — or what?"

The answer is just as vague as the question, to-wit:

J. L. Hernon

"Yes—or no. What are you talking about, or aren't you talking?"

"I'm talking about my Tony Herrera - Lew Raymond show at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night. It seems that since we were down last Monday everybody has forgotten there is such a place."

"Okay—there'll be something in the paper about that tomorrow. Hang up."

AH—THAT ZOUP!

"Wait a minute—not so fast. How about printing that recipe for the turtle soup we are going to have at the sports writers' picnic next Sunday? A lot of people would like to know how to make turtle soup."

"No—that's out. I don't like turtle soup even when you change the name to vegetable soup. So long, I'm sorry you called."

"Wait a minute—wait a minute. Don't rush me. If you're not going to print the turtle soup recipe, don't forget that other secret. Get that in the paper."

"What's that?"

"That I'm putting on the Ted Yarosz-Vince Dundee fight at Forbes Field on July 24."

"Do you know any more secrets?"

"No."

"All right, then. Maybe it will be all right for me to hang up?"

A VERY BUSY MAN

If you know any man who is busier than this John Hernon, with his turtle soup and everything coming all together, just keep it to yourself. It'll be one secret he doesn't know anything about.

M.-A. LEAGUE ALTERS RULES

The Mid-Atlantic League will operate during the second half campaign with a staff of eight traveling umpires instead of four, and will have a more rigid suspension rule. These changes were put into effect by the league's club owners at a special session in Wheeling yesterday.

From now on, a suspended player will be benched for at least six days. Previously, a player might return to action the day following his suspension. It also was decided to restrict clubs to five rookies instead of six.

Due to a difference of opinion between the board of directors and Johnny Stuart, the president-manager, the Huntington club has two managers today. The board has ordered that Stuart be relieved as manager and has appointed Earl Smith, of Portsmouth, O., in his place. Stuart, the controlling stockholder, claims the board lacks the authority to oust him and has named Bernie Neis, former major league star, as manager.

Milwaukee Gets Pro Title Event

MILWAUKEE, July 6 (AP)—The National Pofessional Golfers' Association tournament will be held on the Blue Mound Country Club's course here August 8-13, Albert R. Gates, representing the association, announced when local boosters informed him the $9,000 needed to defray expenses had been underwritten.

Qualifying tournaments will be held in 25 sections of the country.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

NEW YORK, July 6.—Managing the Cleveland club this season comes under the head of a migrain malady. That's the fancy name for a headache. Manager Johnson displacing Manager Peckinpaugh wasn't switching horses in midstream. It was trading hosses in a flood. And so far as Peck and Barney are concerned, it was more like trading a bad case of jitters for St. Vitus dance. Peck is now sitting out the dance and letting Barney hoof it with tears in his eyes.

Nick Altrock

I don't know what ails the Injuns, but since the Big Train took command he's been troubled with hot hoxes, avalanches and washouts. Nobody wished Walter more luck than his old Washington playmates, but I will admit we did some very fancy train wrecking when we played in Cleveland last week.

But all's fair in love, war and pennant races.

IN TOUCH

How often you say: "Had I only known!" It's for lack of knowledge mistakes are made . . . opportunities are lost . . . bargains are missed . . . life is complicated beyond all need. • But every day the telephone simplifies this business of living. It brings you information accurately and promptly. It keeps you in touch. It untangles misunderstandings. • No item of home equipment adds more to your happiness and efficiency. With a telephone the facts are at your finger tips. Without it, vital information may be out of reach.

Useful every day—priceless in emergencies—the telephone is well worth its small cost. You can have one in your home for less than 10 cents a day!

Business Men Uncertain of Final Outcome of Inflation.

—By LEWIS HANEY—

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, July 6.—In talking with almost any group of business men of average intelligence, I invariably get the statement:

"We are at sea. We don't know where we are going. But our business is gaining."

They usually agree that nothing like this has occurred in the past and that is true. I believe that we have never before had inflation in advance of, or right at the beginning of, a recovery from depression.

We have never had so much political manipulation of financial and business affairs. Nor have we before had business "recovering" from depression because the dollar had been depreciated.

Judged by usual standards, the gain in business and the stock market may truly be called abnormal. The very sharpness and extent of the rise have been extraordinary, and suggest the abnormal.

You cannot explain it without considering such abnormal things as the deliberate policy of reducing the value of the dollar, the industrial control measures and the resulting flight of capital from the country.

The abnormally sharp rise in paper dollar quotations, attended by this great uncertainty and lack of precedent, is one of the difficulties in a policy of inflation.

And this is particularly true of so-called "controlled inflation." When someone at Washington is trying to run the inflation process, no one knows how far it will go or when it will stop.

I FIND too much of a tendency to bring out the old alibi that "no one knows what inflation is." Most thoughtful men know what inflation is. What they really don't know is, what is the administration going to do next in the present campaign to depreciate the dollar.

We all know that to do anything to our money which makes it worth less, and thus makes the general level of prices rise, is inflation. But we don't know how the present experiment with "controlled" inflation is going to work.

ONE SURE thing is that we do now have inflation, and that it is chiefly responsible for the rise in prices and in business activity.

And we may be sure that this "recovery" will continue until the inflation is controlled, or until it runs its usual course.

I READ of the increase in imports and that this means that business men are buying materials to cover expanding requirements. But is not most of it due to the desire to buy before the dollar loses more of its buying power? The importers ordered while their dollars were worth 85 cents, knowing that the dollar may fall to 50 cents.

Such import buying is really a sort of flight from the dollar. The importer is getting his dollars out of the country before they depreciate further.

MUCH THE same sort of thing is affecting domestic business. They say that a company with big inventories, which it can readily turn into cash, is in fine shape. But this is because prices have risen, and prices have risen because dollars have been marked down.

When the inventories are sold at high prices, the money received may have no greater total purchasing power than the goods were worth at lower prices.

"BUT," YOU say, "at least we get the goods to moving, and the money to circulating. That makes business good."

Here lies the big question. Is business really and fundamentally good, to the extent that it is stimulated by inflation? What will be the outcome when inflation is stopped?

IF YOU say that nobody knows the answer, then you are admitting that complete uncertainty reigns. Is that really good for business?

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, July 6. The market was due 1¼ to 1⅜ cents lower, opened off 3/4c and at 12:15 p. m. was off ⅞ to 1 cent. Sterling basis 4.19½.

The market closed ⅛ to ¼ pence lower based on sterling at 4.16⅝.

CREDIT SYSTEM TESTED BY SLUMP

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, July 6.—During the economic collapse, from which the country is apparently making successful efforts to emerge, credit in all its phases was rigorously tested.

Mr. Rukeyser

Public and private borrowers in unusually large numbers defaulted, and numerous others were only saved from similar humiliation by voluntary leniency on the part of creditors.

Neither of the two main classes of borrowers were spared, although of course the best managed in both groups continued to meet their commitments. The first group consists of organizations, which depend on business profits for their debt paying capacity. The second comprises public agencies, which depend on their tax collecting power.

ECONOMY CRY

Although those with the tax garnering franchise nominally have unlimited financial resources, it develops in periods of acute depression that the power to tax is the power to destroy, and numerous urban and rural taxpayers defaulted and in numerous instances lost their property as a result.

In view of the multitude of troubled situations, many observers felt that the various subdivisions of government had been spending excessively. The correct note is a demand for retrenchment and economy.

One phase of this movement is a demand by bankers and others that political subdivisions improve their fiscal technique. One widespread demand is that taxes be collected monthly, instead of semi-annually, and that municipalities limit their expenditures to what they take in.

KANSAS PIONEERS

The celebrated State of Kansas has pioneered with legislation compelling municipalities to operate on a cost basis.

In deciding that the law was constitutional, Justice Harvey, of the Kansas Supreme Court, said that the new legislation deprived towns of the right to spend "money they do not have, or to incur obligations they cannot meet promptly. Some of them, for one reason or another, had not been doing that, but had conducted their business somewhat on a credit basis. In some, proper books had not been kept, or sufficient publicity given so that citizens could know the financial status. It was thought that waste, extravagance, and an undue burden on taxpayers resulted from such methods of doing business, and the Legislature deemed it prudent to change such practices and put all governmental units on a cash basis."

The act provides that municipalities should fund indebtedness and then get on a cash basis, issuing no new bonds except under the terms of the act. It is believed that a considerable amount of immediate new financing will result.

Chevrolet June Output 100% Over 1932

DETROIT, July 6.—Production of Chevrolet cars and trucks in June more than doubled output for the corresponding month last year, and was the largest single minth's production in two years, according to W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor Company. June output totaled 81,573 units, compared with 36,142 in June last year and 68,538 in May this year.

Approval of Principal Codes May Be Delayed

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

A NEW PROBLEM is being encountered in the formation of codes of business practice under the provisions of the Industrial Recovery Act. The difficulty may make it necessary to withhold presidential approval of individual codes until plans are completed for several of the major industries. After that all the codes may be given approval at one time.

It has been found that competition within a single industry is not the only factor to be taken into consideration. Competition between industries is a vital influence in many cases.

As an example, coal comes into direct competition with oil as a fuel for many purposes. Price frequently is the determining factor in a consumer's choice between the two fuels. Some plants are equipped to burn either coal or oil.

* * *

Competitive Factors Must Be Considered

NATURALLY LEADERS in the coal industry would be unwilling to make a code which would result in substantially higher prices unless they had assurances that oil would be treated in a corresponding manner. A sharp rise in the price of one fuel would result in the loss of customers to the other unless the usual price differentials should be maintained.

In addition to taking competitive conditions between industries into consideration in forming codes, it is quite probable that President Roosevelt will approve the codes of the principal industries at one time. The view is being taken that it would be unfair to impose conditions on one industry several weeks or possibly several months in advance of a competing industry.

* * *

Other Industries Come Into Conflict

COAL AND OIL are not the only industries which come into competition. In the case of steel we find that it comes into direct competition with lumber and cement for many construction purposes. In the pipe field it is in competition with brass and copper. Pipe made of 8½-cent copper gives steel more competition than it would if copper should return to an 18-cent level.

These are only some of the factors which are being taken into consideration and which are causing delays in the development of industrial codes.

STOCKS RENEW FORWARD MOVE

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—The jigging dollar settled down to a slow waltz today and financial markets generally maintained a firm position in quite active trading.

Pivotal stocks were steady, but displayed little inclination to repeat their recent soaring movements. Pool operations were apparent in some specialties. The British pound sterling sagged a trifle in terms of dollars and most European gold currencies fluctuated in unimportant fractions. Wheat was firm and corn jumped another cent or more on further reports of crop damage. Cotton was a bit easier at one time as acreage uncertainties continued to offset large mill buying. Bar silver was off $\frac{3}{8}$ of a cent at 36$\frac{3}{8}$ cents an ounce. Bonds were slightly irregular.

Some of the rail shares were imbued with renewed courage by fresh news of substantial increases in traffic. Advances of 1 to 2 or more points were recorded by Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, Delaware and Hudson and Central of New Jersey. The tobaccos were also given a run, with Reynolds B, Liggett and Myers B, American B and Lorillard getting up around 1 to 3. Consolidated Gas came back with a 2-point advance, and American Power and Light and Public Service of New Jersey stepped up more than a point each. Oils up fractionally to 2 points included Standard of New Jersey, Houston, Pure and Socony. Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft and Aviation Corporation showed similar gains. The alcohols and farm stocks were indifferent.

Ammunition for the carrier group was furnished by the car-loading figures of the Pennsylvania for last week, which disclosed a gain of some 25,000 over the same period last year.

Recent steadiness of copper company shares apparently has been based on the assumption that some of the producers, with cost of operations reduced to a minimum in the past year or so, may be able to show a fair profit should the metal sell at 9 cents a pound. Domestic shipments are now being placed at 8$\frac{1}{2}$ cents a pound, with some dealers unwilling to sell below 8$\frac{3}{4}$. Foreign business is at the 8$\frac{3}{4}$-cent rate. A moderate demand from fabricators is reported, while ultimate consumers are said to be purchasing in steady volume.

Of especial interest to the followers of the oil group was the announcement of the American Petroleum Institute of a decrease of 883,000 barrels in gasoline storage during the past week. At the same time, various mid-western fields were posting advances in crude prices despite the fact that production now is larger than last April when there was a general reduction of around 10 cents a barrel. Increased prices were viewed in some quarters as a move to balance supply and demand in order to anticipate the code provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

WHEAT SCORES SHARP GAIN

CHICAGO, July 6.—Grain values quickly turned upward today after a hesitant start. Buyers found encouragement in President Roosevelt's reiteration of his purpose to bring about advances in prices of commodities.

The United States crop outlook was also generally construed as suggesting much higher prices. Opening $\frac{1}{8}$@1$\frac{1}{2}$ down, wheat later scored decided gains. Corn started $\frac{5}{8}$ off to $\frac{1}{2}$ up, and subsequently rose all around.

Persistent buying on the part of commission houses lifted wheat soon about three cents above early low figures. The fact that offerings of September delivery of wheat were scarce at $1 had a stimulating effect and so too did a rise of corn to fresh high price records for the season. At times, numerous wheat traders bought corn, and helped along the advances both of corn and wheat.

Ignoring reports of rain and of prospects of more, wheat and corn prices continued to mount, despite intermittent heavy selling to collect profits.

Corn and oats largely followed wheat market changes.

Provisions were responsive to upturns of hog values and of grains.

STEEL OUTPUT CONTINUES UPWARD

Assured of sustained operations through this month by heavy specifications against expiring second quarter contracts, the steel industry is readjusting its prices in conformity with expected changes in operating costs. All of the changes thus far made have been conservative and in consonance with the expressed policy of the National Industrial Recovery Administration.

Previous prices on bars, plates, shapes and semi-finished steel were re-established for the third quarter. Wire prices likewise were reaffirmed, although quotations on nails, long excessively low, were marked up $5 a ton. Hot-rolled strip and sheets are being quoted at prices originally announced for this quarter, but subsequently withdrawn. These quotations represent increases of $1 a ton on hot strip and $3 a ton on sheets. Advances in pipe, ranging from zero up to $7 a ton for the base sizes, merely partially restore sharp reductions made a few months ago. An increase of $5 a ton on cold-rolled strip is a change that has been sorely needed to bring prices in line with production outlays. Among minor products, track spikes have been raised $5 a ton for July shipment, but prices on tie plates have been reaffirmed.

LEADERS STUDY CODE

The same caution that has characterized the steel industry's attitude toward prices is manifest in the careful manner in which it is preparing a code. Chief executives of leading companies have given codification their undivided attention for several weeks, but final approval must be given in a general meeting of the entire industry and no call for such a conference has yet been made.

Meanwhile steel output continues to mount. Although the holiday interrupted operations in various finishing departments, notably tin plate mills, steel ingot production did not suffer materially and now stands at 56 per cent of capacity, compared with 53 per cent a week ago.

The blowing in today of two additional blast furnaces in the Pittsburgh district indicates that the sharp upswing in pig iron production, manifest in June, has not yet spent its force.

DEMAND WIDENING

Last month there was a net gain of 27 active stacks and the 90 furnaces in operation on July 1 were making 51,675 tons daily as compared with 63 on June 1 operating at a rate of 33,160 tons a day. The month's production was 1,265,007 tons or 42,166 tons a day, compared with 887,252 tons, or 28,621 tons daily, in May, an increase on a daily basis of 47.3 per cent. The daily average in June was the highest since July, 1931.

Pressure for steel on the part of automobile manufacturers is increasing. Certain steel companies which have been operating full on motor car business are now losing orders because they cannot meet deliveries specified by users. Motor car output in June is estimated to have totaled 250,000 units, and there is a strong possibility that July production will be fully as large. Steel demand is steadily becoming more diversified.

Picture Concern Wipes Out Deficit

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP.)—A deficit of $1,063,000 which Paramount Pictures Corporation had on January 28 has been wiped out and the company now has a surplus, it was testified yesterday at an examination of the bankrupt Paramount-Publix Corporation.

Ralph A. Kohn, treasurer of the bankrupt company, of which Paramount Pictures is a subsidiary, testified before Federal Referee Henry K. Davis that the deficit was wiped out largely as a result of the foreign exchange situation. His testimony came during examination by Frederick Sheffield, counsel for a bondholders' committee.

Allied Chemicals June Shipments Up

NEW YORK, July 6.—The Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation announces that tonnage shipped in June was the largest in volume since October, 1930. Shipments in May were the largest in volume since December, 1931.

Financial Topics

Street Sees Covering Of 'Box Sales' In Rails

There is plenty of encouragement in the form of news development and prospect to account for the heavy buying movement which has been asserting itself in railroad shares, particularly since the start of the week. But even in face of these prospects it would appear that dividend resumption on many issues is still some distance in the future. The character of much of the buying has been rather unusual according to some observers, who recall the stories of "selling against the box" a few years ago. Some observers are given to wondering if a good part of current buying is not the result of closing out these technical short positions, taken reputedly by large investors as a means of "hedging" themselves during the bear market.

A liberal sprinkling of selling on a deferred delivery basis has been noted in Drug, Inc., since the announcement a week ago of plans for returning its several subsidiaries to independent management and ultimate dissolution of the holding unit. The stock was long popular as an investment abroad particularly in England where it had large holdings in Boots Drug Ltd. Much of the indicated liquidation of late is believed to have originated in such sources presumably for the reason among other things that holders of moderate blocks of Drug, Inc., do not relish the idea particularly of becoming owners of "odd lots" in the shares of the five constituent companies which are slated to become separate entities again.

Business in Northeastern Ohio today followed the steel industry into new high levels on the economic chart. Accompanied by restoration of some wage cuts, steel production at Youngstown soared to 65 per cent, as compared with a 5 per cent average for the country as a whole. The rubber industry, centered at Akron, maintained capacity production. A rumored increase in tire prices failed to materialize, and the delay brought out greater retail buying.

The upswing in business which put Postal Telegraph and Cable in the "black" in May, is continuing with business improving rather than deteriorating. Those close to the company are somewhat surprised by the betterment which has taken place. The anticipated seasonal decline in the company's business, both in telegrams and cables has not materialized. The improvement in Postal Telegraph is a big help to International Telephone. Postal's troubles were one of the sore spots in the International Telephone picture and the improvement in Postal has meant a betterment in the entire situation.

The thirty-seventh postponement of the auction sale of large blocks of Commonwealth Edison Company, Peoples Gas, Light and Coke and Public Service Company of Northern Illinois stocks, pledged as collateral for loans made to two Insull investment trusts by four New York banks, was made today. The sale was originally set for May 5, 1932, but has been deferred from month to month by litigation. The stocks pledged had a market value of $10,325,000 14 months ago; they are now worth approximately $9,700,000.

With the next quarterly meeting of directors of United States Steel slated for July 25, Wall street is already beginning to conjecture the probable nature of action on the preferred dividend. The stock has been on a $2 basis since January, when a 50 cent dividend was ordered for the last quarter of 1932, and to date a total of $2.50 in arrears has accumulated. Realizing the high regard in which the corporation holds its senior issue, the assumption naturally is that there will be no unnecessary delay in reinstating the $7 cumulative rate as earnings permit.

Cement Company Boosts Wages 10 to 20%

NEW YORK, July 6.—The Alpha Portland Cement Company as of July 1 increased wages and salaries 10 per cent to 20 per cent at all of its plants, the highest increase being applicable to the minimum wage.

At the same time, operations have been placed on a 6-hour day basis in order to give employment to as many men as possible.

SAVAGE PARADISE

Audacious Girl Reveals Secrets Of the Southern Seas

By MARGARET MATCHES

CHAPTER XLIII.

The skipper was becoming impossible. He was talking heatedly and threateningly with two wiry, bush-haired natives whose expressions were unmistakably dark with mounting anger. Over his wrist hung a superb carved tooth necklace. Such a thing is priced by jungle people beyond all comprehension. The skipper was determined to have it for three sticks of tobacco. To complicate matters, he had only one stick left, and was trying to impress upon the owner of the necklace that he would leave two sticks more at the plantation house with Tony. One could see at a glance that the kanakas were not taking kindly to him. Either they had been aboard the Nuloa or they knew by their uncanny method of relaying information that we had a pig on board. A kanaka would sell his soul and his wife for a pig. The owner of the necklace delivered the ultimatum: "Maskee tobac. Me like pig!" Much to our relief, the skipper thrust the necklace roughly back into the native's hand.

It was time for us to go, for it was fast getting dark. We passed through the village, followed by a crowd of naked savages. It was beautiful. Mogera at dusk. A mary, straining her eyes to make a grass pulpul, glanced up with a greeting as we went by. A young man was weaving a pandanus mat before his doorway. A boy, evidently having once been on a plantation, called out to me: "Good ap-ter-noon!" I called back: "Yacoq!" He grinned, and I called: "You no savvy Yacoq!"

"Yes, missus, me savvy Yacoq!"

Then over the stile, and through the banana orchard, and back we went to the waiting lorry, which in pidgin is "ship-kerosene-belong-bush."

MESSAGE DELAYED

Anchored in Seeadlerhafen, midway between Mokareng and Lorengau, on Manus, the largest island of the Admiraltys, we lingered for several days. The skipper wanted to get orders from headquarters in Rabaul as to whether we should return to Madang with what copra we had or concentrate our cargo here, to be picked up by the island steamer, and proceed north again toward the equator for more. Of the six or seven wireless stations throughout Melanesia, one is at Lorengau. But it was being dismantled, which caused delay. The delay made little difference to us, for here in a wild and beautiful country were gathered together a score of enjoyable people glad to have us in their midst. Three of them were women.

The Hermit Islands form a large scattered group in those ill-charted waters just below the equator. We had sighted the group about noon one day when the sun smiled happily for a while and then sobered as with a grave thought. We had set out from Manus for Pelleluhun in the Ninnigoes, where a great cargo of copra awaited us. Capt. Alys decided to anchor within the reef at the Hermits for the rest of the day, that we might again set sail for Pelleluhun before mid-night and arrive there at daybreak. This would save tacking about among the dangerous and unfamiliar waters of the Ninnigoes during the hours before dawn.

DANGEROUS REEF

Maron is the largest island of the Hermit group. Here a great coral reef, with an entrance not more than five hundred feet wide, forms a quiet lagoon where a ship may find safe harbor from any storm—if it can negotiate the narrow entrance. Alongside the other shore of Maron itself is safe anchorage for the island steamer, but here at the far end of the chain of atolls the reef lies boiling in a rainbow fury, and the island steamer Marsina—likewise most other craft—gives this track wide berth. But it was in our direct path, and Capt. Alys was not the man to swerve from his course because of a reef.

There is something very fascinating and very terrible about a great reef, especially if you are going to negotiate a narrow channel into its still heart. This reef was a deadly, foaming thing, visible from many miles' distance because of its sullen greenish-yellow color. Great combers dash themselves upon it ceaselessly, relentlessly, breaking over it in fine white spray and hungrily eddying about the coral that rises close to the surface.

Even my untrained eye could locate the gateway through the circle of coral by the depth of color. But I heaved a sigh of relief when we were finally in the center of the large, perfectly quiet and pellucid lagoon.

A SUBMARINE WORLD

With hours before them in which to idle, most of the crew went over to one of the small uninhabited islands to hunt plover and parrots for our supper.

The waters outside the reef were enough to make an angler delirious—fishing grounds untouched and unknown. An Aladdin's treasure of gorgeous darting jewels, among sea-gardens that blossom gloriously. The engineer and I couldn't stand it. Taking the pinnace and two boys, we headed for the outer reef to troll. Back at Lorengau we had prepared ourselves with bait for such an emergency. We had secured a great stem of a spider-lily plant — my two hands could not span it. The layers of the stem peel off, making excellent bait to attract fish. Our fishing equipment consisted of spider-lily, a hundred feet of clothesline (stout clothesline, as this was no piker fishing expedition) and seven hooks ranging in size from three to seven inches. I perched myself on the very nose of the pinnace, that I might look down into the marvels of the matchlessly beautiful submarine world.

Fathoms below us, but seeming close enough to touch, rose-colored trees put forth mauve blossoms. Other branched trees showed every shade of blue. Great frilled cushions lay on the sea-floor like scattered pretties of a royal boudoir. The fish are as colorful as the coral. Schools of large royal-blue fish clustered in shoals around our pinnace; there were others with the glory of the spread peacock. Our prize catch of the day was a huge emperor snapper, weighing about 12 pounds, of the color of a pigeon-blood ruby. We caught two devilish little sharks, but we could see far below where great predatory sharks marauded among the bright schools.

CATCH BIG FISH

Our first catch was a 25-pound sea-pike. We had trolled four minutes with a five-inch hook baited with spider-lily at the end of our far-trailing line when the engineer cried "Strike!" He played the line out, using all his strength against the pulling of the fish at the other end, while the Nuloa's bo'sn kept the boat headed swiftly around the outer reef. The other boy stood tense, mallet in hand, to be of service when the big fish should be hauled in. Gradually the engineer began pulling in the line, and when we could see our catch he called to me: "Stay where you are, and look out for your feet!" In a few minutes I saw why. Above the surface of the water appeared a shining gray body, and two rows of white spikes gleamed from its upper and lower jaws. With a superhuman lift the engineer brought the great sea-pike over the stern, and for a moment it lashed and leaped on the floor of the boat. The kanaka's mallet came down with a mighty blow on its head. Still it threshed about. Again the mallet descended, and this time the great fish lay still.

We got four sea-pike and two sharks within an hour; each landing was a thrilling and dangerous experience. Each one had to be crowned quickly with the mallet or those dreadful teeth would have avenged themselves.

SUCCESSFUL AFTERNOON

We trolled all afternoon, with enormous success. Besides the sea-pikes and sharks we had half a dozen large blue fish and the prize emperor snapper. But the ones we lost! This is no fish story. We lost all of our hooks. Whether they were huge sharks that chewed them, or monster sea-pikes, we shall never know. But somewhere out there in the waters of the Hermit Islands some great fish are regretting the invasion of the white man.

Our catch was duly admired, and turned over to the Chinese cook to salt promptly and hang up to dry. Only he didn't salt it enough, and it all spoiled the next day. Maskee!

At Mokareng we had acquired a great clam. Or rather, as it weighed only about 50 pounds, it wasn't such a great one as clams go out there. It had deeply-fluted shells, perilous shells, for they remain slightly parted, ready to bite anything that intrudes within. All of us had given the great white clam lots of breathing space. The cook had made it into a stew with cocoanut milk. It was a good dinner that night! There were fresh fish, clam stew and a pie made from little parrots that the boys had brought back from the island.

It was nearly midnight when the Nuloa's engine was started up for the sail to Pelleluhun. Verily our lives were in the hollow of the skipper's hand that night, for the clouded sky made utter darkness and Capt. Alys had never been within this reef before.

DANGEROUS TASK

On the topdeck I stretched [illegible] on a skylight, quite out of the way, to watch him, not without a little excited queer feeling in the pit of my stomach. I knew the danger if he misjudged the channel, and there would be no help from any corner in case of shipwreck.

Instantly the anchor was up and the engine under way, the little man became part of the ship. Slowly we pushed forward. Keenly alive, constantly moving from port to starboard, peering into the dark with his night glasses, back and forth on the bridge, the skipper called his commands tersely to the native quartermaster. "Port!" . . . "Starboard! Liklik, das all!" . . . "Steady! Liklik, you bloody fool! You no savvy liklik!" . . . "Steedd-y!" And all the while the roar of the reef was coming closer.

Then closer, closer the booming, almost drowning out the master's commands. We were at the channel. A few tense minutes of uncertainty . . . Above the crashing came the skipper's clear "Stead-y!" . . . The roar was still around us . . . and then, at blessed last, came a cheery "There we are!" A breaking of tension . . . "Guess we're clear of the reef now."

And so we left Maron for the Ninnigoes.

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

FRIENDSHIP RING

By LAURA WHEELER

The Friendship Ring is an old-time favorite that enjoys great popularity today. It is made of scraps of material; there are old quilts in which each block was made of different scraps, making a most attractive quilt, if the pieces used in each block were harmonious. In this way, the pattern affords an excellent opportunity for using up small pieces of material or for the popular Friendship quilt, devoting each block to the materials given by one friend.

Pattern No. 484 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for a pattern for this design to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Keep up the good work, fellows!

The Junior Patrol is just like a big snowball—it keeps getting bigger and bigger. Every day, almost, somewhere another fellow organizes a junior patrol, and every day more and more members send in their Patrol pledges signed up.

The hot weather doesn't make any difference. Instead of melting the Junior Patrol snowball, this July sun just makes it grow bigger and bigger! With every fellow pushing, we'll soon have one of the biggest and swellest clubs in the world!

Good ideas keep showering down in the Sun-Telegraph office of the Junior Patrol. Right here in the Mail Box we have told you about only some of them. Today we have lots more. For instance, how about a tennis club? If every member of your patrol doesn't know how to play tennis, a friend can soon teach him and then your whole Patrol can start playing—singles and doubles.

Some fellows think tennis is too easy. They will soon change their minds after they have played for awhile. It takes strength and endurance to play good tennis, but it isn't necessary to be a big fellow. Besides, if you learn to play tennis before you grow up, you will be a better player and will have more fun.

There are tennis courts everywhere, many of them free. Let Junior and Snuggins know how you get along, fellows—and you girls, too. That ball will fly every which way when you hit it at first, but pretty soon you will get better control.

We have a very fine letter today full of ideas from Marian L. Swart, of 246 Park avenue, Washington, Pa., who is the captain of the Park Avenue Junior Patrol of Washington. Because it is such a good letter, we are going to publish it in full:

"My patrol members received their membership cards and they were very glad to get them. As you want to hear news about Patrols I am going to tell you about ours.

"I organized my club June 13, and the first thing we did was to elect officers. But instead of electing captain and lieutenant we elected president, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

"Now, we changed and elected Captain, First Lieutenant, Second Lieutenant, and Lieutenant of the Treasury. We have our constitution and its preamble all made and we are trying very hard to improve it. We are also trying hard to live up to the Junior Patrol pledge.

"Almost every club day we have an entertainment given by two or three of the members.

"We are also having a contest for the older members of the club. I am giving a prize to the one who can get the most words out of the words "Junior Patrol Club." We expect to have more contests later.

"I am trying my best to collect enough money from the club members to buy films to take our pictures so we can send them to the Sun-Telegraph.

"I am going to write to the Junior Patrol often and I would like to get some letters from other captains of Patrol clubs."

Boy, that's a whole swarm of ideas all at once, Marian. What do you say, captains? Marian's address is right above here. Why not write and tell her what you are doing in your clubs? And at the same time, write to Uncle Hall or Junior and tell him, too.

That contest idea is a fine one. It will make the fellows and girls think hard and help them to improve their vocabularies and teach them to use the dictionary.

We are glad you changed the names of your officers to captains and lieutenants, Marian. Being a captain or a lieutenant is more fun and more distinctive than just plain president or secretary.

Don't forget the pictures, fellows! Send them right along, and if they are good, they may be published in the paper. More Patrol news will be in this space tomorrow.

SAGA OF SWEENEY'S GULCH

By Aunt Bella.

Note—Aunt Bella's grandpa yesterday told how he went to trial as attorney for Hard Hearted Mazie, who had shot down Mike Gumboil when he threatened to open a saloon in Sweeney's Gulch. (Mazie owned the other three saloons).

* * *

The court convened, the jury leaned to stringing from a tree,
But then I spoke, their hearts awoke at Mazie's sad stories;
"They ain't no doubt, as you've found out, Mike's dead as dead can be,
To stop suspense, 'twas self-defense, as all of you shall see."
Well, Mazie took the witness stand at this "Not Guilty" plea,
And wept and sniffed and cried and yowled (a sight, you'll both agree)
And then confessed (were we impressed!) in saddened, minor key:
"I killed him 'cause I loved him, 'cause I loved him, yes sir-ree!"
"She killed him 'cause she loved him, 'Cause she loved him, don't you see?"
I shouted to the jury at this lucky break for me;
The jury wept, the judge he howled, the crowd all yelled "YIP-PEE!"
And everything looked peaches for an old-time shooting spree.

(Tomorrow's instalment, you may be [illegible], will complete Auntie B.'s narrative.)

New York Is a Mining Town

Speaking of old mining towns don't forget New York City.

It's no ghost village of Nevada, nor is it an abandoned silver city of the West.

But it has its diggings. And those ramps, tunnels and shafts are all down in Wall street. When the market is neat and nimble it's exactly like boom days in Cripple Creek.

Give the brokers a couple of healthy reactions and they tear the lid off the works. Theater tickets hop to $11, diamond bracelets are sold with hinges at the elbow, ermine, silks and satins rustle and slither.

The boys buy limousines with gold wheels. They purchase city and suburban homes. They pay $50 to see a fight and wine runs like a coward in a battle.

One thing we will say about the broker. He spends his jack when he has it. He also spends yours when he has it. And he usually has it.

His racket is a gamble and even Morgan's preferred list is no sure thing. There are some people holding J. P.'s tips who can't let go to scratch their necks.

Anybody who makes his money spontaneous regards the profits as combustion. And that's how the streeters toss theirs around. One day it's milk and honey. The next day it's water and bee stings.

So you can see that every so often Manhattan has a pay day in the mines. The boys get on their dog sleds and mush north to Broadway, lights, music and dancing girls.

It's a short life, but a taxed one. We never heard the boys complain. They are all good losers, having had plenty of practice in that since 1929.

The night life of Manhattan takes its pulse from the streeters. They're the boys who back the opera, angel the shows and devil the investor.

Racketeering in Beer

Authorities Should Get Busy At Once To Halt Gang Methods In Incipience.

Beer racketeering must be stamped out now—in the days of its incipiency.

Already it has assumed the domineering, reckless, murderous tyranny that was born of the prohibition law, as it opened the way to quick millions for men of quick triggers.

Racketeering and gangsterism, in their most devilishly competent and effectively organized forms, scornful of all law, all rights, all decency, all rights to live, even those of infants, seems certainly to be creeping into the legalized beer business.

Racketeering in beer must be blotted out—now, while there is time to stop it. It is a situation that calls for immediate action, before it becomes a great deal more serious.

The sale of beer is now a legal business, open to anyone qualified by the law of the state to engage in it, under certain restrictions. Those engaged in it are answerable to nobody except society and the law.

Consequently the interference of ANYBODY ELSE, whether representatives of so-called protective associations or individuals, with those dealers in beer who are attending to their own affairs within the provisions of the law, is the height of impudence.

But when that is accompanied by threats, bombings, and perhaps murder (a Mt. Washington killing is suspected to be a beer war crime) it is time that all branches of government concerned—local, state and federal—get busy and break up this threat to liberty right now.

Racketeering crimes have been frequent—and unpunished—in Pittsburgh.

Let there be a change in that record.

Protect Merchant Marine!

Without Government Aid, American Ships Could Be Driven From the Seas.

Under President Roosevelt's leadership, the United States is moving further in the direction of developing a thoroughly balanced economic life.

It has rejected the older theory of national specialization, which is again being aired at the World Economic Conference at London.

Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, ran counter to the American philosophy of self containment in his plea for an end of shipping subsidies.

In an address before the conference, Mr. Chamberlain piously said:

"The stress of competition has in some cases led governments to attempt to assist their own subjects by the grant of subsidies, an expedient which all will probably agree is unsound in principle."

This seemingly innocuous and apparently idealistic policy, if adopted, would especially handicap the United States in international competition.

With its higher wage standards and its more generous crew requirements, American ships, without government aid, could be driven from the seas by those who employ coolie labor.

Having already built up its own fleet, Britain can without harm to its national interests propose that other developing nations eschew the right to pursue similar methods.

Any abandonment by the United States of its present system of government subsidies to shipping would be inconsistent with the broader trend toward economic nationalism.

The American delegation at London accordingly should be instructed to accept no such restraints on our freedom in developing an adequate merchant marine.

Great, Glorious Fourth!

List Of Injured Treated At Hospitals Exceeds Number Reported Last Year.

The Fourth was glorious—too glorious. Fireworks and fire crackers were freely sold. They were freely used.

The number of injuries treated at hospitals reached 115, according to the latest available compilation. Reference to the Sun-Telegraph files shows that about 80 such injuries were treated in hospitals a year ago.

These figures cover only the more serious cases. There is no way to check on the minor injuries treated in homes by family physicians and by means of home remedies. Such cases undoubtedly would increase the total of injuries substantially.

Fortunately there were no deaths directly attributable to fire crackers in Pittsburgh.

The signers of the Declaration of Independence felt that they were taking a bold step which should be remembered and celebrated by posterity. Their courage has been remembered, but the glory of Independence Day is not enhanced by allowing little girls and little boys to blow off their fingers or to suffer the dangers of lockjaw.

The increase in hospital cases of fire cracker injuries again emphasizes the need for a city ordinance which will stop the sales of these dangerous explosives in Pittsburgh.

The ordinance making it possible for a few merchants to profit by the sale of fire crackers is not justified by the record of increased casualties.

Grounds for Marriage

In Any State.

Well, there is something new under the sun.

An Oakland (Cal.) man complains in divorce court that his wife was "inexpensively cruel" to him. He alleges that she refused to wear silk or satin and that in order to escape nagging he had to pretend that clothes he bought for her cost from $15 to $20 less than their actual price.

He also says he urged her to open as many charge accounts as she could and she refused.

We can't say whether these are grounds for divorce in California. But if the divorce is granted we can see a long line of ladies waiting outside the Courthouse ready to marry the gentleman in the case. And a longer line of men waiting to marry the lady.

By HELEN ROWLAND

Avoirdupois and Love

In the Gay Nineties, men liked their women "plump and huggable." Now, if a woman gains a couple of pounds, her husband presents her with a reducing belt as a token of his "love."

* * *

Recently, a disillusioned wife went to court and claimed that her husband's love faded and decreased in inverse proportion to her weight. She gained 40 pounds avoirdupois—and his love went down 40 points.

* * *

Slenderness in a bride of 18 may be graceful and girlish—but just what a man finds "cuddlesome" in an animated bone, with points where there should be curves and edges, or hollows where there should be plumpness and dimples, is mystifying.

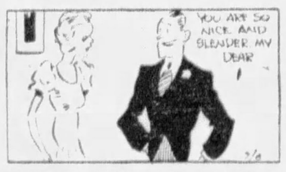
Once upon a time, a girl used to wear plenty of ruffles and pads and petticoats, to give the effect of what was known as a "figure." And she bound steel and whalebone around her waist in order to look huggable. But, you'd think a man would scratch his fingers trying to grasp a modern debutante's elbow or to pat her on the shoulder-blade!

* * *

As a matter of fact and record, plump people are more cheerful and much easier on the nerves than half-starved animated bones. That's why Brutus preferred fat men to those with "a lean and hungry look."

* * *

No! Men seldom desert jolly, good-natured, plump wives. But, Mexico and Reno are often filled with sylph-like beauties, who have grown sharp-tempered and nervous on reducing diets and bending exercises.



And the truth in the case mentioned is that it was not the 40 pounds the lady gained which caused her husband's fancy to turn to a blonde, but the long months she spent apart from him, in a health resort.

Naturally, as a woman grows older, fatter and duller, the bright flame of romance dies down to a steady and (sometimes lukewarm) affection. But then, how about a MAN growing older, fatter and duller?

* * *

Any masculine "love" that is so weak that a woman has to starve, worry, struggle and playact, in order to retain her hold on it, is hardly worth the price of the rowing machine, the rubber bathing suit and the reducing belt.

* * *

Sometimes, I think I am the only woman in America who is trying to GAIN a few pounds and to become plump and huggable and jolly!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 6.—Brooklyn, more than Manhattan, is a paradise for the saunterer. It requires more bosomy adjectives than most writers command to pay tribute to the bright gusto of Flatbush avenue. Or to the exquisite serenity of Prospect Park in the gathering twilight.

No American city is less unblurred by hurry. Brooklyn citizens have not outlived the term "trolley dodgers." Its restaurants retain the mellowness that suggest an elbow of cheese and a pewter of brown ale. One on Nostrand avenue, indeed, heralds: "Good books with meals."

An English writer returned home to write: "Across the bridge is Brooklyn, pithy with drowsiness." Brooklynites might be resentful, but that is a description encompassing its charm, its sanctity. After a day of Manhattan's superb gesturing it must be magnificent to loll on a Columbia Heights porch.

Shady open book-stalls are in Brooklyn. And I found one blind alley, like a London mews, lined with stables for riding horses. Also a velvety old-fashioned green for bowling. Rows of dim, dusty houses with enormous entrance halls and dining rooms facing the street. In every yard a baby carriage!

One block of all alike brownstones near Fulton in Brooklyn displayed seven signs "Mid-Wife." Other signs proclaimed: "Rooms with use of bath." At most upstairs windows a refined white face. One wonders why so much altruism frequently running waste does not flow their way. Sensitive, lonely and neglected, they go stumbling along on the crumbling edge of things. Window gazing widows—flung haphazard at Fate!

A sudden emergency for typing brought a breezy and slightly elegant young lady from an agency. It was easy to see she was one of the innumerables with a chinchilla mind and a cony income—hoity toity! The work was delayed by dilly-dallying before a vanity mirror and two telephone calls to "George." It was also carelessly done and smeary. But what irritated me most, I think, was when departing she arched gushingly: "A pleasure to meet you Mr. McGinnis. I just love you on the radio." See that stubby little finger nail—I just bit it smack off.

Three celebrated New Yorkers, including a famous international banker, have a phobia about revolving doors and will not twirl through under any circumstance. Such a neurosis interested me. A neurologist over the phone tells me it is not uncommon in the metropolis. He has several patients so afflicted. There is only one cure. That is to keep whirling through revolving doors until the dread vanishes. He further tells me of another New Yorker who is in deadly fear of scissors although he shaves with an old-fashioned razor and does not flinch from any other type of sharp-bladed instrument.

The late Don Byrne used to flutter with the ipuses in crowds. That was why he finally fled to Ireland's open spaces. This morbid dread of confined places, known medically as claustrophobia, has been a frequent affliction of writers down the centuries from Shakespeare to Robert Louis Stevenson. A reverse malady is called agoraphobia—a fear of open spaces. The only writer I ever heard suffered its twinges was Heywood Broun, years ago.

People who cannot afford such highfaluting ailments seldom have them. I always think of Bill Hogg's withering sarcasm for a mediocre actor indulging a fit of temperament. "Why is it," he inquired, "you hams never get temperamental with a policeman?"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Such gorgeous dreams we have! Such passionate energy and dynamite determination we put into that dreaming! Then why don't our dreams come true?

The answer is simple, but mighty hard to take—

OUR DREAMS DON'T COME TRUE BECAUSE WE DON'T REALLY WANT OR EXPECT THEM TO COME TRUE, AND WOULDN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH OURSELVES IF THEY DID.

As dreams they're swell, but as practical plans they're a washout. All of which we know, and yet—

There's young Ruth Walsh, for example. Ruth wants to be a writer. Or rather, Ruth dreams of being a writer. It is highly improbable, however, that Ruth really wants to be a writer or would like being a writer if the chance came. For Ruth's idea of writing has no relationship, whatever, to the actual work of writing.

It's a very glamorous affair, that dream. A sort of Hollywood version of a literary career. Incense filled studios. Fascinating, scintillating circles of Bohemian friends. Travel. Adventure. Fame in big, blazing letters on book covers, in book reviews. And in the midst of it Ruth, herself, radiant but mysterious, lounging around in Perfectly Heavenly Pajamas, dashing up Perfectly Marvelous Thoughts and getting herself applauded and quoted at every turn.

A swell dream! But it has about as much resemblance to Real Writing as a toasted marshmallow has to a ditch-digging machine. No professional writer on earth ever wrote like that or wanted to. For dreary drilling and downright drudgery, a serious writing career has practically every other job skinned. Moreover, real writers dote on seclusion, obscurity and a general dinginess of "atmosphere" which would give spot-light Ruthie the jitters in an hour.

No; it's a safe bet Ruth wouldn't like being a writer, even if she could. And she couldn't, for she has none of the qualifications. She hates to study. She has no love for words, no compelling interest in people, none of those hungers and urges which lie behind all sincere writing. Books are scenery for Ruthie; not a vital need.

All of which Ruthie, in her secret heart, knows perfectly well. As do we all. Then why does Ruth—why do we all—go on dreaming, knowing we can never achieve those dreams; knowing, also, that we are passing up real opportunities while we indulge in them?

WE DREAM AS A MEANS OF ESCAPE

Escape from what? Escape from Reality. The Reality of hard work, disagreeable competition and criticism, monotony, obscurity. Escape from Failure—our own stupidity and cowardice, our own mediocrity.

In real life we're apt to be pretty Small Potatoes. But the stupidest sap can be Big Pumpkins in his dreams, without the slightest effort.

So we dream. We seldom really want to be what we dream. If we did, we wouldn't dream; we'd get busy. And rarely have we the makings to fit our dream. But that doesn't matter, either. The dream is what counts. For the dream is our way out.

We dream on. And, while we dream, real life with its real opportunities slips away. We could have achieved some actual power and pleasure and peace if we had spent the time on living which we've spent in dreaming. But we were too lazy, too conceited, too cowardly, too silly.

And so, like Esau, we "exchange our heritage for a mess of pottage"—and only have a stomach ache to show for it in the end.

What's the matter with America and Americans today? That's what's the matter. Trashy movies and magazines have driven us dream-dazy. Real life isn't good enough for us any more. We've got to be Big Shots, even if it's all in our eye!

What happens to a nation or an individual that gets That Way? Just stick around. You'll see.

Lord Jeffery Amherst, Military Genius and Statesman—Never Received Credit He Deserved

By EDWIN C. HILL

ARRESTING question marks leap from J. C. Long's intensely interesting biography of that soldier of the king who came from a "far countree" to win Canada for the British Empire. It is the story of Lord Jeffery Amherst, and it throws a flood of light upon the reason why England was able to destroy French power on the North American continent, and why Canada preferred to go along with England rather than consent to become a part of the United States.

After all, perhaps we Americans were the greater losers, because even our country would have been the better with sane, sensible, stout-hearted Canada as a member of our family. But it was not so to be and probably never will be, for Canada is essentially British in her own right and a mighty stable and forward-looking nation.

The great soldier whose name is borne by the fine little college that turned out Calvin Coolidge, Dwight W. Morrow and so many other fine men has never received the credit which was his due. If Robert Clive won India for Great Britain, Jeffery Amherst as certainly won Canada. Yet the histories and the story-books have always made Gen. Wolfe, who fell in the taking of Quebec, the hero of the great adventure. But it was Amherst who planned the strategy and whose wise and tolerant policies secured the loyalty of the French provinces. But Lord Amherst, brilliant as he was, could not dramatize himself, and the glory which was rightfully his mantled the shoulders of lesser men.

* * *

A Story of Bad Luck and Pride

THIS new and important chronicle of his career and of the events which founded the Dominion of Canada, was made possible by the discovery, not long ago, in the cellar of a country house in Kent, England, of 17 chests which had lain there for 140 years and which contained a vast store of letters and documents which had belonged to Lord Amherst; and these tell the story of the bad luck, the modesty and the pride which prevented Lord Amherst from reaping the rewards that were due him for adding an empire to the British crown.

It tells the story of his relentless conquest of the savage Indian tribes that were the allies of the French, and of how he planned the grand strategy which, in a series of hammer blows, drove the troops of the French King from Quebec and Ticonderoga and Crown Point and Montreal.

But it is not altogether his military genius that entitles him to first rank. He was a great statesman, and gave the French-Canadians such assurance of religious toleration that when Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, representing the American colonies, went to Canada to plead for Canadian support in the revolution against Great Britain, the French-Canadians decided that they would be able to practice their religion more freely under the British flag than under the rule of the New Englanders. That was the decision almost 150 years ago that kept Canada out of the American Union.

When the revolution occurred Lord Amherst had retired, and when George the Third called upon him to return to America as commander-in-chief of the British forces and to put down the rebellion of the American colonies, Lord Amherst declined. His refusal, which angered the King and cost him a dukedom and great wealth, was not due to any special sympathy for the American cause, but because he knew the Americans. He had commanded them in action. He knew the breed.

* * *

Result Might Have Been Different

BUT it is a very interesting speculation, I think, as to what the result of the war between Great Britain and the American colonies might have been if a commander of Lord Amherst's precision, forethought and swift performance as a military leader, had been in command of the British armies instead of the dull and slothful Howe, the careless Burgoyne and the blundering Cornwallis. His very refusal to accept the command and its responsibilities was an indication of his vision and grasp of realities. He was familiar with the wilderness in which the British armies would have to move, the wilderness that destroyed Braddock.

But if he had accepted, there might have been no Saratoga and no Yorktown, for he was the greatest military administrator England produced between the Duke of Marlborough and the Duke of Wellington.

Since his career was free from blunders and stupidities, it is at least possible that he would have avoided the traps into which Burgoyne fell at Saratoga and Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown.

It is at least possible that George Washington would not have been able to escape from a British trap in Long Island and retreat northward through Manhattan, while a dull British general drank his wine and basked in the smiles of the artful Mrs. Murray, almost on the very spot where the Empire State Building stands today.

Every measure and estimate of the character and ability of Lord Amherst suggests the strange fact that unalterable destiny was at work when he declined the task of subduing the rebellious colonies. It was not in the plan and pattern of the Almighty that they were to be subdued. And the only British soldier who might have been and almost certainly would have been competent for the task coldly declined. Strange, was it not?

DIPLOMACY

By Winifred Black

I don't believe I like John so very well after all.

Nice fellow—John—just a little bit too nice—I'm afraid. For my taste anyhow.

John is suave and pleasant and agreeable and—diplomatic. I can stand everything about him except his diplomacy.

Oh, yes, tact and diplomacy are fine qualities in many people and in many situations. But when it comes to a friend, isn't it just a little different?

Jim and I were talking about John last night. Jim has always liked John but just now he almost hates him.

A man Jim knows has just cheated him out of rather a good business which Jim worked very hard to get.

He is a good business man, too—is Jim—but he had a good deal on his mind and he wasn't so very well and his doctor sent him away on a long cruise and when Jim stepped ashore and went down to his office again—he couldn't believe the truth.

He had been euchered out of his money and out of his business and almost out of his home, for the man had taken occasion to try to prejudice Jim's wife against him.

The trying was a failure. Jim's wife wouldn't listen to a word against Jim—but the attempt had been made all right.

Jim's friends gathered around him and stood by him and Jim is on his feet again, but he doesn't like John any more.

Oh, yes, John was all right about money and that sort of thing, but the other day Jim took his wife for a little run into the country and they stopped at a roadhouse for lunch and there was John lunching with the crook and having apparently a very good time of it, he and the crook.

John came round to Jim's office the next day—just dropped in casually, don't you know, and "explained" his luncheon with the crook.

Uh—huh, said Jim. Quite so, why certainly, of course, don't mention it Johnny, and things like that.

And now he says he will never trust John again as long as he lives.

Well enough in his way, maybe, but just a mite too "tactful" and too "broad-minded" for Jim.

I don't blame Jim a bit, do you?

A crook is a crook, and why should any honest man curry favor with him, just because he hasn't the courage to make an enemy of him.

I hope Jim will have "tact" and "diplomacy" enough to wave John a cheery goodby and make it a point to be "in conference" when John just drops in.

Loyalty—that's the one thing you need from a friend; if you don't get that and don't give it when your turn comes—just stop talking about friendship—that's all.
